Man Almost Instantly Killed by Street Car

FOUNDRYMAN HIT WHEN HE STEPPED ON WRONG TRACK

MOTORCYCLE OFFICER HURT IN COLLISION

Twenty-Two Drivers Fined and 54 More Arrested in Traffic War Tuesday.

W. J. Powell, of Lanette, Ala., was killed almost instantly and Motorcycle Officer D. L. Taylor badly injured in the only serious accidents recorded at police station Tuesday.

Powell, whose Atlanta address is 907 Lee street, died at Grady hospital a short time after he was struck by a street car at Lee street and Campbellton road. He died without regaining consciousness. Physicians attributed his death to loss of blood and internal injuries.

The extent of Officer Taylor's hurts had not been determined early Wednesday morning, and while internal injuries are feared, he is expected to recover.

The police war on traffic law violators was continued unabated, and 22 drivers found guilty in recorder's court during the day paid fines aggregating $232. Twelve drivers were fined for violating traffic ordinances, three for reckless driving, two for speeding and five for violating the dimmer ordinance, while 11 cases were dismissed.

54 Drivers Arrested.

A total of 54 drivers were arrested Tuesday on charges of breaking traffic laws, 32 having been arrested on charges of violating traffic ordinances, 15 for speeding, four for reckless driving and two for violating dimmer ordinances.

G. M. Freeman, 19, of Jonesboro road, was arrested by Call Officers Coode and Bullard on a charge of reckless driving when he drove his team of mules into the side of a street car at Pryor and Garnett streets. Officers claim that he was drunk and to blame for the accident.

Powell's body was identified by fellow boarders at the home of Mrs. George Keith, 907 Lee street, where the man had resided since coming to Atlanta about two weeks ago. The only mark of identification on the body was a letter found in the man's pocket addressed to W. J. Powell, and signed by J. A. Powell.

Accident Unavoidable

According to F. R. Holland, conductor on the car which ran the man down, and J. H. Hendon, motorman, the accident was unavoidable, as Powell, evidently confused by a street car approaching from the opposite direction, stepped directly in the path of

ANNUAL SATURNALIA SETS BOULEVARDS AGOG

Garb Paris Artists at Revel

Paris, June 17.—A gay riot on the boulevards, when crowds mobbed several groups of students wearing carefree air and little or nothing else, opened the grand annual artists' celebration of the Quatre Arts ball which will probably be still going strong when these lines are read in America.

It was a "Phoenician" ball, and judging from the costumes the weather in Phoenecia must have been so warm that people needed no clothes.

American tourists doing the boulevards for the first time gasped and stared, and gasped again Tuesday evening when they saw hundreds of bare-legged art students and girl models, garbed in flimsy shawls and radiant smiles, walking, running and frisking a joyous way toward Luna park, where the ball was held and the shawls were no longer required.

The Americans enjoyed the sight, but apparently some of the Frenchmen found the show immodest. There were numerous scuffles, the police intervened, five of the semi-nude ones were arrested and the remainder of the group bundled into taxis, which hid what was exposed by their abbreviated costumes, and hurried to the ball without causing further eyestrain.

It was rumored that the affair was to be the wildest on record, and certain senators even plan to forbid the balls in the future on the ground that they hurt France in the eyes of foreigners. In point of fact some of the wildest extravagances of the annual parties are perpetrated by members of the foreign artist colony. Last year more than thirty pretty young girls were counted who wore no clothes at all.

All the indignation, however, only increased the demand for tickets. Americans, hearing that the setting of the party and the costumes of the artists were to be modeled on the back-to-nature days of Phoenecia, paid as high as $40 and $50 for admission.

The party will begin to get going some time in the small hours of Wednesday morning, and Paris knows from experience that the morning sun will find merry but dishevelled bands of mirth-makers still parading the streets between Luna park and home, and diving nude into the basins of some of the city's prettiest fountains.

The committee in charge of the affair announced that it would not be responsible for guests falling into the hands of the police due to lack of garments, but this at an early hour had failed to halt the almost general disrobement.

COURT ENJOINS NEW CEMETERY

Decision Based on Alleged Participation of Commissioner C. G. Turner in Granting Permit.

An order enjoining County Commissioner C. G. Turner, his alleged agent, O. E. Etheridge, and their associates from seeking in any manner to establish a cemetery in Oak Grove district, by virtue of a permit granted them by the county commissioners, was passed in Fulton superior court Tuesday by Judge E. D. Thomas.

Judge Thomas granted the injunction on the ground that Commissioner Turner, who presided at the meeting of the board, of which he is a member, and who voted to grant the permit, was financially interested in the project. The court's order ruled that Commissioner Turner's being financially interested in the property on which the cemetery was to be established would have no effect for or against the validity of the permit, except for the reason that the board's act in granting the permit was quasi-judicial in character, and not merely ministerial.

The purport of the order is that the permit would have been legal had Commissioner Turner not participated in the deliberations of the meeting when it was granted; inasmuch as it refused an injunction on all the other grounds upon which the petition therefor was based.

The court held that the city of Atlanta and property owners in the affected district, plaintiffs in the case, were not entitled to an injunction on

The Great John C. Calhoun Discovers Early Atlanta

¶ When Atlanta possessed but one railroad and a meager population of 100 souls, John C. Calhoun rose before the Southwestern Convention of 1845 in Memphis and declared:

¶ "What is needed to complete a cheap, speedy and safe intercourse between the Valley of the Mississippi and the Southern Atlantic Coast is a good system of railroads. For this purpose . . . all the railroads which have been projected, although each has looked only to its local interest, must necessarily unite at a point in DeKalb County, in the State of Georgia, called Atlanta, not far from the village of Decatur." *

¶ There was the original conception of Atlanta as the Gateway to the South. Even in the '40's, a vision like Calhoun's could not overlook the advantages offered by Atlanta as the railroad center of this section. And since becoming the railroad center, Atlanta naturally and logically has become the sales, distributing and advertising center of the South.

¶ And no system of advertising, distributing and selling has proved complete in this section without the use of the remarkably profitable columns of The Atlanta Constitution.

*At that time, Atlanta was a suburb of Decatur.

PLEDGE CAMPAIGN OF COMMON SENSE AND STRICT TRUTH

Gen. Dawes, in Non-Partisan Address From Front Porch, Gives Outline of Fight.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Chicago, June 17.—A common-sense campaign, with strict adherence to the truth and no quarter for the demagogue and no quarter asked, will be conducted by General Charles G. Dawes, republican vice presidential nominee, he told his friends and neighbors gathered tonight on the Dawes home lawn in Evanston on the shore of Lake Michigan.

The dynamic banker and soldier, author of the Dawes reparations report, left no doubt that he will be seen and heard in a speaking tour of the nation, calling for an end to preachments of prejudice and passion. His words tonight were his first extended utterance since his nomination.

The reception, attended by William M. Butler, new chairman of the republican national committee, amounted to an unofficial notification of his nomination. James A. Patten, business man and philanthropist, in words of neighborly praise and pride, tendered to General Dawes the felicitations of his friends and neighbors.

The general, in response, addressing members of all parties and avoiding partisan utterance, spoke as follows.

"You have done me a great honor in gathering here, irrespective of party and simply as my friends and neighbors in Evanston where I have lived for so many years.

"I know you want me to say something, and yet upon such an occasion as this it would be unseemly in me to

Hancock, of Thomaston, seriously injured when the automobile in which they were riding overturned while passing another on a narrow road. All were prominent. The injured are in a Griffin hospital.

Jones is survived by his widow and three children, while Rombou is survived by his widow and several children.

CLASHING CLAIMS FOG REAL STATUS OF DEMOCRAT RACE

ROCKWELL CLAIMS CONTROL OF RULES

Manager of McAdoo Plans Overthrow of Two-Thirds Majority—Defeat of Move Would Be Blow.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER.

New York, June 17.—These days before the democratic convention are being utilized by the managers of the various presidential candidates to lay down propaganda barrages in advance of the real fighting next week.

Managers of Al Smith, William G. McAdoo, Oscar Underwood and the stable of dark horses are extremely active, vocally. National committeemen are busy arranging last-minute physical details regarding the convention seating and the routine program. Delegates, however, will not arrive in great force until the end of the week and pending that time only predictions and guesses of the various managers are available in figuring the outlook as to the nomination.

Headlines Mark Scramble.

Tom Taggart, of Indiana, and George Brennan, of Illinois, are due Wednesday. They are the two most powerful individuals in the party, perhaps, and after they arrive the real business of getting down to horse trading will begin. But until they effect some powerful alliances the nomination is a matter of pure guessing.

One glance at the headlines of the New York newspapers is sufficient to indicate the variety of guesses. In the editions Tuesday one found this array of conflicting headlines:

"Ralston Falling Back; Cox and Davis Gaining."

"Cox Boom Arrives."

"Davis Strength Grows."

"Smith Followers Confident."

One Honest Writer.

These headlines reflect the confused situation here. Anticipating that Al Smith would have the advantage of the friendly atmosphere of the convention city, the McAdoo managers are

Garden Blooms With Paint

LAST DETAILS OF WORK DONE FOR DELEGATES

And Flags for Convention

BY OTIS PEABODY SWIFT.

New York, June 17.—New York is giving a party, and New York is planning to do the thing in style. The old front parlor of Madison Square Garden has been dusted up, redecorated, upholstered and repainted and all the boys are getting on their Sunday clothes.

Sweltering in the first real heat of summer, the town is planning to give the democratic national convention a real hot time. Cordell Hull, chairman of the democratic national committee, opened up the doors of the Garden Monday and told the world to look. Blushing under a new complexion that hid all signs of previous fights, circuses, motor boat shows and bike races, the battered old arena looked like a boudoir.

Hull frankly says that it is the most beautiful convention he has ever seen.

The platform for the chairman, speakers and 300 distinguished democrats who will occupy the spotlight has now been completed, even to a white painted ornamental balustrade. About the platform are seats for some 800 newspapermen. Beyond that are seats for the nearly 1,100 delegates. The delegates face the platform, while east and west of their seats, and facing them, are seats for the alternates.

Draped and festooned American flags decorate the balconies, the heavy old girders supporting the roof also are hidden by a tremendous American flag. With all this, the Garden shines under a new coat of white paint, except where the box circle shimmers in a coat of blue.

Probably the Garden hasn't felt as youthful in years. Shoved off to one side of Madison square, it doubtless has envied the ever-increasing glamor of Fifth avenue. But now Fifth avenue is only a footpath at its door. The avenue's decorations already are up, consisting of twin lines of orange, blue and white electric lights.

The restaurant in the Garden has become a thing of joy under the loving hand of David Lantenberg, concessionaire, who has put in a complete new kitchen. Meanwhile the old Garden theater, in the northwest corner of the historic building, has been turned into a men's club. There are dark, soft draperies, big easy club chairs, and every convenience for the tired delegate and tired alternate in idle moments.

The visitors will go home on stretchers, exhausted with joy, if the entertainment enthusiasts have their way.

Just before they go, they will be invited to sail up the Hudson river to West Point. Plans for the trip, announced Monday, state that the day will be enlivened by an aerial rodeo.

Five entertaining airplanes will swoop down on the ship. All the way up the river the planes will do stunt flying.

The room bureau of the hotel association reports that leading hotels can accommodate 40,000 persons, and that a list of nearly 1,000 apartment rooms also has been secured for use during the convention period. Hotel men say there will be no difficulty in handling the crowd, and deny that rooms will be at a premium convention week.

White Indians of Darien

CURIOUS TRIBESMEN ON WAY TO UNITED STATES

Willing To Become Civilized

BY PAUL BENTON.

(Staff Correspondent of the North American Newspaper Alliance and the Rochester Times Union. Copyright, 1924.)

Colon, Canal Zone, June 17.—Richard O. Marsh, organizer and leader of the Marsh Darien expedition which for four months has been exploring the jungles of southeastern Panama, arrived in Colon last evening with what he believes to be complete proof of the success of his search for "white Indians."

The explorer brought with him three primitive white Indians and three other Indians. A slower boat is bringing three more Indians from the San Blas coast, whence the party started for Colon.

Mr. Marsh said that the three whites he has with him appear to be primitive Nordics. They are a boy of 18, a girl of 16 and a boy of 10. Physically they are splendid creatures. They have fine flaxen hair, blue green eyes and white skins. The males are covered with a down-like hair.

Two of the other Indians are described by Mr Marsh as of the "paleolithic or Cro-Magnon type, very robust." Four "modern" or "neolithic Mongolian" type Indians, among them, Ima Paguina, the "chief of chiefs" or king of the San Blas Indians, a sub-chief and the chief's wife and son are accompanying Marsh to the States.

The explorer will sail for New York with his entire party as soon as arrangements can be made, probably in a week. Fifty members of the original party returned with him, among them Harry Johnson, of Panama, naturalist and official taxidermist and Charlton, official photographer. Of the others who left Panama with him early in February, two have died. Others were compelled to leave the party because of illness.

All of the Marsh party's Indians will be taken to the United States to be examined by scientists, his own scientists being, he said "either dead or in the hospital." He said that he could bring hundreds of Indians with him, if necessary, and expects to show scientists that 40,000 Indians in Darien demonstrate the evolution of the so-called Nordic white type from paleolithic man. He considers this the greatest ethnological discovery in history.

The hitherto implacable Darien Indians are ready for civilization, Mr Marsh said. "The Darien Indians are now my friends. The head chiefs have agreed to accept modern civilization and schools under reasonable guarantees of liberty and freedom to live their lives without burdensome restraints or impositions.

Georgians To Be Guests at Round Of Hospitalities

Week of Continuous Festivities at Coney Island Planned for Democrats.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, June 17.—Plans to give the 56 democratic convention delegates from Georgia a welcome that will rival southern hospitality were formulated today by the "Commitee of 100" for the state of Georgia.

A welcoming dinner at the Commodore hotel will be tendered the delegates next Monday, and on Tusday they will visit Oyster Bay as guests of Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany. Wednesday, they will attend a reception at the Ritz-Carlton with Mrs. William R. Hearst as the hostess. Luncheons, teas, dinners and receptions are to be scattered through the remainder of the week.

Festivities Continuous.

A week of continuous festivity at Coney Island has been undertaken by the National Democratic club of this city as its contribution to the entertainment of convention delegates and visitors, their families and friends.

Labor night will be Tuesday, lodge night on Wednesday, veterans' night on Thursday. Friday will be "Little Old New York" night, to be followed on Saturday by the crowning of "Miss Democracy" from among bathing beauties representing the 54 states and territories who shall have sur-

ATLANTA RESERVE BANK REDUCES REDISCOUNT RATE

Board Approves Cut to 4 Per Cent on All Paper—New Rate Effective Immediately.

BY CLARK W. BOOTH.

The rediscount rate of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank will be cut from 4 1-2 to 4 per cent on all classes of paper beginning Wednesday morning, according to an announcement made Tuesday afternoon by M. B. Wellborn, governor of the Sixth District Federal Reserve bank here. Governor Wellborn made the announcement, following the receipt of news from Washington to the effect that the federal reserve board had approved the application of the sixth district bank to cut its rates. The action is in line with moves made by four other federal reserve banks.

The most recent and notable cuts in rediscount rates were those of the New York and Boston reserve banks, which in the last few months have reduced their rates from 4 1-2 to 3 1-2 per cent. The process of lowering the rates at these two institutions was through two cuts, the rates being lowered one-half of one per cent each time.

The cut in the sixth district still leaves the federal reserve rediscount rate in this territory one-half of one per cent above the rates enjoyed in the Boston and New York districts. The cut here is the first one in over a year, the last slash bringing the rate from 5 per cent to the 4 1-2 per cent rate that existed until the order Tuesday.

Governor Wellborn in making the announcement of the cut attached no significance to the order except that the Atlanta bank had merely followed in the steps of the banks in the other districts of the country. He would not discuss the probable effect the new rate would have on business in general.

Reductions here, as elsewhere, in the country, however, show that easier money rates and increased liquidation exists, which are two salient signs of a good outlook in business and industry. The rate in this district is still a little above normal, but is quite a reduction from the high seven per cent that existed during the war-time period.

SUPREME COURT HEARS PETITION OF TWO YOUTHS

The state supreme court heard arguments Tuesday in the case of Gervis Bloodworth and Willie Jones, of Butler, accused of the murder of Howard F. Underwood, traveling salesman, in Taylor county on December 3, 1923. The two defendants are under sentence of death.

Homer Beeland, of Reynolds, leading defense counsel, presented the argument for new trial and Gilbert C. Robinson, of Montezuma, and T. R. Flournoy, of Columbus, represented the state. The court's decision will be announced later.

NO SCARS LIKELY WITH DEMOCRATS OVER NOMINATIONS

RANCOR APPARENT ONLY ON SURFACE

Private and Personal Contacts of Party Leaders Quite Fraternal, Sullivan Declares.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, June 17.—The public will be misled if it takes too seriously the predictions of a fight to a schism in the democratic convention and a rough-house time generally.

Neither the religious issue nor the contests between the various candidates is being allowed to reach a state that might leave scars. So far as the temper of the leaders is concerned, nothing has yet happened that would make it impossible to name a ticket, for example, consisting of McAdoo and Smith, or McAdoo and Walsh.

In every way there is really less rancor in the situation than appears on the surface. A significant development is the fact that a Protestant body in New York is making an organized effort in behalf of Governor Smith to inform persons in other states that Smith as governor has never been influenced by the fact that he is a Catholic, that opposition to Smith on account of his religion is unfair and based on misinformation, and to call attention to his excellent record as governor.

Similarly, among some Catholic democrats in southern and middle western states, there is an organized effort to show that this particular group of Catholics is opposed to Smith because he is supposed to be wet and belongs to Tammany, and in spite of the fact that he is a Catholic.

Undoubtedly, it is true that the Ku Klux Klan issue will be pressed upon the democratic convention next week more vigorously than upon the re-

LEAGUE TO PROBE COST OF EDUCATION

Reasons for High Cost of Education in Atlanta Sought by Taxpayers' League.

An investigation of reasons for the higher cost of education in Atlanta than in other Georgia cities has been launched by the Atlanta Taxpayers' league, it was made known Tuesday by Frank Weldon, secretary.

"Taxpayers of Atlanta are vitally interested in this question of school costs, for the reason that the present board of education has gone on record in declaring that a two-mill increase in the tax rate will be necessary to maintain the present program in the schools, the program that costs more per pupil per year than in any other Georgia school system," Mr. Weldon explained.

"The league has not decided definitely whether to oppose the one-mill tax proposed for schools this year, but it would like the fact to be known that Atlanta will be the only one of the larger cities in Georgia which will have a tax increase for this year." he said.

During the last three years taxes on property in Augusta have been lowered 1.1 mills; taxes on property in Macon have been lowered two mills since 1922, taxes on property in Savannah have been lowered 10 mills since 1922 and taxes on property in Columbus have been lowered 6.5 mills since 1922, it was stated.

Dr. R. N. Eubanks, member of the board of education, said Tuesday that he was not sufficiently familiar with the school systems of the other Georgia cities to give a reason for the difference in cost between them and Atlanta, but that he believed it would be found due chiefly to difference in teachers' salaries.

Comparative salary schedules are to be secured by the taxpayers' league.

Cost of education per pupil per year is $43.70 in Augusta, $32.33 in Macon, $28.25 in Savannah, about $40 in Columbus and between $44.30 and $49.94 in Atlanta, depending on the actual enrollment, which has not been compiled for this year by the census and attendance department of the Atlanta schools.

MEANS ACCUSED OF FRAMED DEAL AS TRIAL STARTS

Government Attorney Declares Phone Calls to Daugherty and Blair in Rum Deal Faked.

MELLON GAVE $1,700,000 TO G. O. P. WAR CHEST

Witness Claims Means Said Money Was To Be Repaid From Liquor Withdrawals.

New York, June 17.—Charles W. Johnson, a government witness in the trial of Gaston B. Means, testified that Means had told him of huge money advances made to the republican party by Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury.

The money was to be repaid, Johnson swore Means told him, by charging $200 a barrel for releasing bonded liquor from government warehouses.

Mellon contributed $1,700,000 to the G. O. P., according to Means' alleged statement to Johnson.

Johnson, a former Uniontown, Pa., brewer, was the first witness in the trial in which Means and Elmer Jarnecke, his secretary, are charged with attempting illegally to remove liquor from bonded government warehouses.

Showed Money to Jarnecke.

Declaring that he had received $15,097, in Washington from Frank Saupp, who had obtained the money from one "Charles Storey," Johnson said he showed the money to Jarnecke, who took him to see Means in the Gordon hotel, Washington.

Removal of 50 barrels of liquor from a distillery at Brownsville, Pa., was to have been paid for with the $15,097, which covered the cost of internal revenue strip stamps and a sum for bond against the use of the liquor for beverage purposes.

"Means told me," Johnson testified, "not to worry about the transaction, that he (Means) was Burns' right-hand man."

William J. Burns, since resigned, was the chief of the department of justice investigation bureau at the time.

"Have you heard," Johnson testified that Means asked him during their conversation, "of the money Mellon has contributed to the republican party? He has given $1,700,000, which the party will repay. They are going to charge $200 a barrel to get whisky out of bond."

Means is alleged to have shown Johnson a card bearing the printed words: "Department of justice."

"It's all right, Mr. Means," Johnson said he told the investigator. "I don't care who you are, just so you do the job. If it is illegal I don't want it done."

"You know enough about it, Mr. Johnson," Means was said to have replied, "to know that this liquor is under the jurisdiction of Mr. Blair."

Johnson said he understood Means to refer to C. H. Blair, head of the internal revenue bureau.

A receipt for the $15,097 was introduced as evidence after Johnson and testified that he had given the money to Jarnecke in the Lehigh hotel, in Washington, and had obtained a receipt.

The liquor was to have been delivered the following Saturday, Johnson testified, and when it did not arrive Johnson came to New York to see Means.

Jarnecke again conducted the former brewer to Means and the latter assured Johnson that the liquor would be delivered a week from the Saturday upon which it first had been promised.

Turning to the phone, Johnson said, Means ostensibly put in long distance telephone calls to Blair and to Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, in Washington.

Calls Were Faked.

In succession Means spoke over the telephone, as Johnson supposed, to Blair and Daugherty, arranging with the former for the removal of the liquor and with Daugherty for the dispatch of a man to Brownsville to see that there was no hitch.

"Everything is all right," Johnson said Means told him as the purported conversation with Daugherty ended.

The prosecution will attempt to show that it was Jarnecke calling from within Means' hotel, and not the Washington officials, with whom Means spoke.

Johnson went to Pittsburg, where he met an Ed Flannigan, who assured him that he need not worry about the liquor removal, but, Johnson said, Flannigan checked out of the hotel in which they were stopping that night.

Again appealing to Means, Johnson was told that a protest over the delay had been sent to Washington.

Johnson will resume the witness stand Wednesday morning.

Cox Boomers Reach Gotham And Set Up Headquarters

New York, June 17.—A staff of boomers for the candidacy of James M. Cox, of Ohio, for president set up headquarters in New York today.

The sight of their campaign tent, the third in a camp of aspirants that is expected to number more than a score before the democratic national convention begins its nominations, temporarily relegated to the background the talk of a struggle between Governor Smith and W. G. McAdoo as to whether two-thirds or majority rule shall govern the convention.

Joel Shoup, a veteran political manager of Dayton, Ohio, is generalissimo of the Cox forces, and Charles E. Norris, Washington representative of the Cox newspapers, is chief of staff. Accompanied by a corps of enthusiastic aids, they pitched camp at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, which also is headquarters for the national democratic committee.

That the convention would prove popular and that Madison Square Garden's 14,000 seats would be filled to overflowing was indicated today in the arrival of an avalanche of demands for accommodations which temporarily disrupted the business of the national committee's subcommittee on arrangements. Cordell Hull, chairman, finally shut himself and his co-workers away from telegrams and long-distance telephone calls, barred the doors to all callers and declared they would remain in executive session until disposition had been made of last minute details of pre-convention arrangements. They were still incommunicado tonight.

Meantime, the last of 3,500 flags was unfurled in Madison Square Garden, the last row of seats was nailed in place, and the last star was pinned to the acre and a half of red, white and sky-blue background under which the gavel opening the convention will sound next Tuesday.

There has been almost no discussion of potential candidates for the vice-presidential nomination. Party leaders on the ground invariably express a belief that candidates for the post will be scarce until all but one of the score or more of "first string" aspirants to the White House have been eliminated.

The prevailing attitude was pictured in a conversation among delegates at the national committee headquarters today.

"The republicans have Dawes," said a visitor from the mid-west. "Why couldn't we run Owen D. Young, a good democrat and Dawes' right-hand man on the reparations committee?"

Another delegate from the east stood up in a hurry.

"Young for vice president?" he asked. "What's the matter with Young for president?"

It was not the first time since the G. O. P. session at Cleveland that the chairman of the General Electric company had been mentioned among the dozen or more candidates discussed.

setting about to offset this by clever means. McAdoo himself will stage a dramatic entry into the convention city Wednesday, and will be met by a large reception committee upon his arrival. His manager thoughtfully telephoned the mayor's office as to the time of arrival and Mayor Hylan promised to have his own reception committee on hand.

McAdoo's genial and able manager, David L. Rockwell, put in a hard afternoon's work explaining to the newspaper correspondents how McAdoo men control the national committee, how they will control 30 out of 54 units on the rules committee, and how this control of the rules committee may upset the old two-thirds rule tradition and enable the convention to nominate its presidential candidate by majority vote.

This two-thirds rule question is the biggest issue facing the convention—outside of the presidential nomination itself, on which it has a most important bearing. McAdoo forces are divided on the issue. Rockwell wants to fight for a rule enabling nomination by majority vote. Isidore Dockweiler, California national committeeman and one of McAdoo's leaders, believes an attempt of this sort would be a tactical error.

Rule Is First Fight.

McAdoo's managers estimate that he will poll more than a majority by the fifth or sixth ballot. The convention by a majority vote can determine whether it will require a simple majority or a two-third majority to nominate. Around that question the first stage of McAdoo's convention fight will center. Outwardly, it will not be made a McAdoo fight, but nevertheless a refusal of the convention to overthrow the two-third rule will be construed as a blow to McAdoo.

Friends of James M. Cox, of Ohio, arrived in force Tuesday and opened headquarters in the Waldorf. Cox will have the Ohio delegation and a group of scattering votes to begin with. His friends are holding him in the background as a possible compromise.

Walls For Gallery Seats.

Managers of favorite sons were bewailing the shortage of gallery tickets. They were accusing the friends of leading candidates of squeezing them out. It appears that the one-state candidates will have no tickets to use in planting a gallery clique. So the demonstrations are likely to be staged only by the leading aspirants.

All candidates are playing according to the unwritten rules, which require that at this stage of the convention two questions be sternly taboo: First, the matter of a second choice in event of failure; second, the vice-presidential nomination.

"We have no second choice," and "anyone is acceptable to us as a vice presidential candidate," are the two stock answers that must be given to all questions on these points now.

Quiet conversations are proceeding among members of the national committee regarding the best way of dealing with the klan and liquor issues. But as the convention is going to be a wide-open affair, and as the bulk of the delegates have not arrived, these conversations were entirely of a speculative nature.

One definite announcement was made by Cordell Hull, democratic national chairman—Cardinal Hayes will deliver the invocation at the opening session of the convention. The committee on arrangements is considering revision of the program so that Senator Harrison's keynote speech will be delivered at a night session Tuesday, instead of at the morning session. This change is contemplated largely because of radio broadcasting conditions. Broadcasting is smoother at night than in day-time and thousands who would be at work during the day hours would be at home where they could listen in on a night address.

Walsh for Chairman.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, who uncovered the Teapot Dome scandal, is the virtual choice of all factions for permanent chairman of the convention.

"After the magnificent work he did at Washington, it would be unforgivable if the convention did not honor him in some signal way for his remarkable services," Judge Rockwell, McAdoo manager, said. Other factions seemed of the same mind.

The New York delegation will hold a meeting Saturday to organize. It has not been decided who will place Governor Smith in nomination, but some were suggesting Rev. Lunn, of Schenectady, lieutenant-governor.

Phelan to Name McAdoo.

McAdoo will be placed before the convention by ex-Senator Phelan of California. The McAdoo general staff is here in full force with the arrival of Thomas Love, national committeeman for Texas, and Angus McLean, national committeeman for North Carolina. Samuel B. Amidon, national committeeman for Kansas, was assisting at McAdoo headquarters also. This suite, occupying the top floor of a large hotel, was the most active place around the convention. Al Smith's suite in an uptown office building was a busy spot also.

But it must be said that most of the activity just now consists of passing out campaign buttons and bunk.

the ground that the city's water supply would be contaminated by drainage from the cemetery into the Chattahoochee river, or because property values would be impaired. Jugde Thomas held these grounds for injunction were based on contingencies far too remote to merit consideration.

There was testimony by experts for and against both propositions before Judge Thomas ten days ago.

Judge Thomas ruled against petitioners for injunction on three of the four grounds on which they based their petition. He held that contentions that the permit was void because Commissioner Turner practiced fraud upon the other members of the board in getting the permit was without merit. The order recited that Commissioner Turner acquainted other members of the board with purpose of the permit and the location of the land proposed to be affected and that there was no fraud in his conduct.

Three Contentions Void.

The court also ruled that the contention that the permit was void because it was "vague and indefinite" was without merit. The plaintiffs had contended that Commissioner Turner, O. E. Etheridge and associates, without naming them, had sought to get a kind of blanket permit so they could put the cemetery anwhere they chose within a large area of territory.

The court held further that there was nothing in the contention that notice should have been given the public that a permit was to be applied for, because the act of the legislature giving county commissioners the power to control establishment of cemeteries does not require such notice. The petitioners had claimed the permit was void because granted without notice to them, and that they were, therefore, being deprived of their property without due process of law. Decreased values in lands was the property loss they said would arise.

The order held that there had been nothing shown the court to warrant holding that the cemetery would have damaged the health of residents in the vicinity or that it would constitute a public nuisance.

Turner Interested.

Judge Thomas found that Commissioner Turner had financed his son, G. B. Turner, and O. E. Etheridge, and himself had a financial interest in the cemetery project; that he presided at the meeting when the permit was granted, put questions to the applicant Etheridge and therefore was interested as a commissioner and as a beneficiary.

The decision of Judge Thomas will be appealed to the supreme court of Georgia, it was announced Tuesday by former Mayor James L. Key and County Attorney Charles Shelton, representing the defendants, composed of the board of county commissioners, Commissioner Turner individually, and Etheridge. In the meantime the injunction is in force.

ALMOST INSTANTLY KILLED BY STREET CAR

the car. The front of the car struck him as he attempted to step back out of danger, knocking him to the pavement.

Powell's wife could not be reached Tuesday night, but it is thought the man came to Atlanta from Lanette about two weeks ago, and had been employed by the New Foundry company as a pattern maker since. Boarders at the Keith home told police that Powell had made previous trips to Atlanta, and stated that he had told them he was married and had several children.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced, pending word from relatives, and the body is at the undertaking establishment of Hunter-Blanchard.

Motorcycle Cop Hurt.

Officer Taylor was hurt when his motorcycle was struck early Tuesday night by an automobile driven by E. L. Jakes, 229 East Lake drive, on Auburn avenue. According to report of Motorcycle Oficer L. P. Higgins, who was with Taylor at the time, they were going out Auburn avenue with Jakes' machine traveling in the same direction.

As Taylor turned sharply, Jake's car rammed the rear of the motorcycle, throwing Taylor twenty-five feet through the air. He was taken to Grady hospital for treatment. The motorcycle was smashed, but none of the occupants of the automobile was injured, and the car was not damaged.

Mrs. C. B. Hunnicutt, 141 McLendon street, and Mrs. A. M. Sloan, South Ashby street, were riding in Jakes' car at the time of the crash.

No one was seriously hurt in a collision Tuesday night between two street cars at Lee and White streets, although Motorman Hambrick suffered a slightly injured knee and several passengers on one of the cars were shaken up.

The accident occurred when a College Park car, in charge of Hambrick, struck the rear end of a Hapeville car, which was on the way to the barns. The Hapeville car stopped suddenly, and as his car was rounding a curve Hambrick failed to see the other car step, but applied the brakes in time to prevent a serious accident.

SUICIDE'S BODY FOUND OVER MOTHER'S GRAVE

Roanoke, Va., June 17.—The body of Charles H. Zirkle, missing since June 2, was found this morning thrown across the mound of earth that marks his mother's grave in the Zirkle family burial ground near Cave Spring, in Roanoke county. In his right hand was clutched a .32 caliber revolver. A bullet in the temple indicated that he had met death at his own hands.

FRANK M'DOWELL JURY COMPLETED

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Clearwater, Fla., June 17.—Taking of testimony in the second trial of Frank McDowell will begin tomorrow morning. The jury that will sit in the case was completed at 5 o'clock this afternoon after an all-day session of court.

McDowell, 19 years old, will be tried on the specific charge of killing his mother as she slept in the McDowell home during a stormy night last February.

At the same time, according to a confession he is alleged to have made and which was introduced as evidence in the first trial, he shot and killed his father, and in February, 1922, he burned to death his two sister in their home in Decatur, Ga.

Quiz Jurors Closely.

The jury was selected only after an exhaustive examination of each man placed in the box, both by the prosecution and the defense. Close attention was given by the defense to the question of insanity as a complete defense in the case, each man being required to state his views as to whether he believed such to be the case before he was permitted to take his seat in the box.

Emphasis was placed by the state upon the stand of the veniremen on capital punishment. They were carefully polled as to whether or not they would vote for the death penalty if the state proved beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant is guilty of the crime as charged in the indictment.

Not only were the prospective jurors questioned as to whether they would give the youthful slayer of his parents the benefit of any reasonable doubt raised in their minds as to his sanity at the time of the crime, but they were also asked if they would surround him with the presumption of innocence prescribed by law, until the contrary had been proven by the state.

Another question stressed by the defense was whether or not there was in the minds of those examined any prejudice against "so-called expert testimony."

Over 100 Men Called.

The special venire of 100 men, as well as 14 others left over from the regular venire, was virtually exhausted. A large number of those examined were excused on short order because of fixed opinions which would not readily yield to testimony that might be adduced in the trial.

As finally selected, the jury is composed largely of middle-aged married men.

Information as to the number of witnesses that will be introduced in the case tomorrow was unavailable tonight. It was indicated today, however, that such expert testimony as may be offered by the defense will not go unchallenged by the state in this trial.

BIGAMY CHARGED

Charles H. Snyder Indicted by Fulton Grand Jury.

An indictment charging bigamy to Charles Henry Snyder, alias Schneider, in the alleged marriage with Mrs. Luneal Dewell on February 1, 1924, when he was the husband of Mrs. Esther Snyder, was returned Tuesday by the Fulton county grand jury. Mrs. Dewell appeared before the grand jury to testify against Snyder.

3,139 DEATHS CAUSED BY BRIGHT'S DISEASE

According to the records in the office of the state bureau of vital statistics there were more deaths in Georgia in 1923 caused by Bright's disease than any other factor. During the twelve months the records show there were 3,139 deaths attributed to this cause.

The diseases of early infancy come second on the list, with 2,878; tuberculosis shows 2,644 deaths; pneumonia, 2,552; apoplexy, 1,724; organic heart diseases, 1,711; accidents, 1,535; influenza, 1,500; cancer, 1,263, and diarrhoea (under two years of age), 1,183.

Comparing these records with 1922, it is shown that influenza climbed from tenth to eighth place on the list. Influenza shows a great variation in fatalities through the four-year period. In 1920 it led the list with 2,580; in 1921, only 278 deaths were recorded from this cause; in 1922 there were 1,014, and in 1923, 1,500. Pneumonia shows a somewhat similar course, there being 2,142 pneumonia deaths in 1920, 1,393 in 1921, 1,773 in 1922, and 2,352 in 1923. With these two exceptions the number of deaths except for the increase in general death registration, runs a regular course during the four-year peirod.

NO SCARS LIKELY FROM NOMINATIONS

publican convention last week. In the republican convention, the proposal had the backing of only a comparatively few leaders from a small number of states, chiefly southern, and therefore unimportant in a republican convention. With the democrats next week, however, the proposal for a declaration against the klan will come from so important a man as Senator Oscar Underwood, of Alabama, and will be put forward with all his force, for Senator Underwood is very earnest about it.

Some who oppose Underwood's proposal insinuate that he is acting in pique. But the fact is, Underwood was stirred up about the klan before he became a candidate and in the first speech of his candidacy included a denunciation of the klan, which denunciation he repeated in state after state.

Klan Against Underwood.

It is a fact that Underwood was defeated in every state he contested except his own. It is also true that in most of those states the Ku Klux Klan was against him. Those who are trying to persuade Senator Underwood not to press the klan issue say that he would have got the same reaction if he had been denouncing the Rotary clubs, or the German turnverein, or the Elks, or the Anti-Saloon league, or the farm bureau, or any other organization. This analogy is specious, however, for it is clear that the klan takes a hand in politics without waiting to be attacked, and is essentially, or at least largely, an organization for political action. It is no more identified with the democratic party than with the republican party. The klan, like the Anti-Saloon league, operates within whatever party is dominant locally. If it can be said that the klan is powerful in the democratic party in Georgia and Texas, so is it powerful in the republican party in Indiana and Ohio.

Because the klan is as frequently found in the republican party as in the democratic party, many democrats ask, "Why should we make the klan issue our funeral, when the republicans evaded it, or practically evade it?"

Might Win Negro Votes.

An unexiled outsider is able to see some humor in the situation. You can hear southern democrats denounce the klan and insist on an anti-klan plank, and in the course of their argument you will hear them put forward a plea to the effect that by denouncing the klan the democrats may have a chance to get the negro vote in such pivotal states as Ohio, Indiana and Missouri. The negro vote in these states has come to be very important. Due to the recent immigration from the south, there are more than 100,000 negro votes in each of the states of Missouri, Indiana, Ohio, New Jersey and New York. As to the first three of these states, if the democratic party should get the entire negro vote, or the bulk of it, they would win.

Some southern democrats can be heard denouncing the klan violently because it proscribes some classes of citizens, while these same democrats in their home states steadily for years have practically proscribed from office-holding, or even from voting, that portion of their citizens who are colored.

Politicians Blamed For Growth.

Those who oppose denouncing the klan say that the politicians themselves are to blame for the inception and the growth of the klan. It is a fact that for years the politicians of both parties have been deferring to groups, colored groups and foreign-born groups. The republican national committee some time ago added to its national conventions some 40 southern delegates, most of whom will be negroes and did so chiefly out of deference to the leaders of the organized negro vote in the north. During the recent debate on the immigration bill, some members of congress, both democratic and republican, took a position against immigration restriction which was pressed upon them by organized groups of foreign voters in New England, New York, Chicago and elsewhere. During the presidential campaign of 1920, practically every group of foreign voters in the country was organized. Both parties wanted to organize them, but the republican party was more successful because it had a better national organization and was better financed, and because the republican position on the league of nations made it easier for them to get the favor of the foreign groups. Already in the present campaign both parties are beginning to think in terms of the organized foreign vote. The democrats are claiming that the republicans will lose the German vote because of the Dawes plan, and the republicans are claiming that Dawes will get the German vote for precisely the same reason.

Klan, Wet Questions Mixed.

In this discussion of the klan issue in the democratic convention, the wet and dry issue is mixed up with the klan issue. It seems clear that the klan, wherever it flourishes, is prevailingly dry and takes in much the same class of citizens as the Anti-Saloon league, which probably accounts, partly at least, for the fact that many of the wet leaders are numbered among those who want the klan denounced.

Some of the wisest politicians deplore paying any attention to the klan because they believe that denunciation is what the klan thrives on; and that the klan will wither away sooner if it is ignored than if it is denounced. The leaders of the klan have included a good many shrewdly commercial persons whose chief interest in it is profit. Considerable fortunes have been made by persons who organized and promoted the sale of memberships. On the business side of it there is an actuarial law working against the klan which will bring it to an end some time. So long as the country presented an untouched field for the sale of memberships the klan could take in money for new memberships faster than the expenses, but when the natural limit of membership is reached, expenses will begin to exceed receipts.

Private Relations Fraternal.

The writer observes that there is rather more public talk about a fight on the klan issue at the democratic convention than really exists, in fact, among the leaders of the various factions and the managers of the various candidates. In their private and personal contacts, these leaders and managers are quite fraternal. The hope of success is a great solvent of acrimony, and the more important leaders of the party are good humored in their personal relations and clearly disposed not to do anything in the convention that will leave serious scars.

PLEDGE CAMPAIGN OF COMMON SENSE

speak in a partisan manner. But it occurs to me that there is one subject which may be called political and yet is thoroughly nonpartisan—a subject upon which all good citizens, whatever may be their party, must agree—and that is the curse of demagoguery in political discussions in this country. To such an extent has grown this evil among the politicians of both parties that the real facts and the economic principles involved in questions of national policy are continually obscured by a dense and putrid fog bank of demagogic argument, designed simply for the purpose of forwarding selfish personal political and group interests.

Demagoguery in Europe.

"I have recently returned from Europe where I have seen in prostrated industry and human suffering the effects of five years of demagogic political appeals to the passions and prejudices of the different peoples as distinguished from appeals to their reason and common sense. To the very brink of the abyss has Europe been brought by this method of treating serious questions, involving great elemental and economic principles. To save herself she has abandoned the demagogue and returned to common sense.

"An orgy of demagogism has been running rife in the world and we here in the United States are feeling its devastating effect. All good republicans and all good democrats who put their country above their party demand the beginning of an era of common sense in public discussions. As human beings, whatever may be our party, we are bound to differ on many subjects, but as good citizens we can unite to demand from those who represent us in political debate that they present our differences honestly and from the standpoint of truth—not from the standpoint of passion and prejudice. The man who distorts facts—the man who preaches pleasant but absolutely inconsistent doctrine to another portion—is a menace to the safety of our fundamental institutions. As good citizens, irrespective of party, we must demand from our political leaders a strict adherence to the truth, including disagreeable truth.

Will Adhere to Truth.

"In the campaign which is before us, and as a duty which I owe, not simply to the party, but to the citizens of the United States, I pledge myself to adhere to the truth and to the common sense conclusions to be drawn therefrom. As to the demagogue on the stump, whatever may be his party, I want it distinctly understood that in the coming campaign I ask no quarter and will give none. In this, at least, I know that I will have the sympathy of all good citizens, irrespective of party, and I hope our political opponents will follow the same course. Let common sense reign.

"When this campaign is over, whatever may be the result, I want to come back to my home town still holding the respect of my neighbors."

President Walter Dill Scott, of Northwestern university, in delivering one of the messages of felicitation on behalf of the people of Evanston, said:

"The significant thing in General Dawes' selection as the nominee for the vice-presidency of the United States is not that this worthy citizen of Evanston is highly honored. The significant thing is that Charles G. Dawes will have an opportunity to make the vice-presidency a center of influence in strengthening international friendships, in promiting national prosperity, in giving dignity to the American flag in every land, and thus in leading America to serve every nation of the world as the recent Dawes report has served the nations of Europe."

Like Front Porch Campaign.

The reception took on many of the characteristics of the "front porch" campaigns, made famous by President Harding and President McKinley, when rain began to fall as the crowd was gathering on the spacious lawn of the Dawes home.

General Dawes invited all to come up on the wide veranda where a band from the Great Lakes naval training station entertained them. Previous to the evening reception General Dawes had entertained a few neighbors and friends at dinner, including William Butler, chairman of the republican national committee.

Is Ideal Candidate.

"General Dawes is the ideal candidate because he is an optimist. He does not believe it necessary for the world to go to the bow-wows, but is willing to work that present evils may be overcome and a better world attained," said President Scott.

"He is the ideal candidate because of the breadth of his views. He is not provincial. He believes in the brotherhood of man and in the possibility of successful cooperation of America with other nations.

"Charles Dawes is the ideal candidate because in all positions he has occupied he has enhanced the prestige and the usefulness of the position. He has never yet held a position as big as himself."

"We are minute men," John C. Shaffer, Chicago publisher and General Dawes' fellow townsman, said, "and we stand ready at all times and under all conditions to help in bringing about your election."

IDENTIFY BODY OF SLAIN BRIDE

Richmond, Va., June 27.—The body of a young white woman found in the James river here this morning was identified tonight as that of Mrs. Violet Sydnor, of South Richmond.

Richmond's entire detective force is searching for Walter Sydnor, 28-year-old husband of the dead woman. Mrs. Sydnor was last seen alive early Saturday night when she left the home of her parents to meet her husband, with whom, according to her mother, she had that afternoon reached an agreement to separate.

Positive identification was established after detectives had worked for several hours on the theory that the body was that of Mrs. John P. Flannagan, wife of a local attorney. Mrs. Flannagan herself, however, establised that identification as erroneous when she appeared at police headquarters to deny it.

Mother Identifies Body.

Identification of the body of Mrs. Sydnor was made by her mother and stepfather, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Rainey, when they viewed it at a local undertaking establishment. Mrs. Rainey was at first uncertain and was convinced only after she had examined the dead woman's clothing. Article after article she identified until with a scream she fell in a faint to the floor.

Following an autopsy in the afternoon, Coroner Whitfield announced that the young woman had been kileld before being thrown into the water and that is the theory upon which police are working.

Severe scalp lacerations and one blow that fractured the skull and the added fact that very little water was found in the lungs bear out the theory that the woman was brutally beaten with a heavy blunt instrument before her body was thrown into the James river, where it was found this morning by a fisherman, floating face downward near the south bank of the city dock, at the foot of Twenty-second street. The hands and arms were clenched on the front of the dead woman's head as if to ward off a blow. Her clothing, however, showed no signs of a struggle.

Husband Not Divorced.

Mrs. Sydnor, who was Violet Warley before her second marriage, met Sydnor, a boilermaker, and became his wife last April, in Halifax, N. C. Subsequently Mr. Rainey, stepfather of the dead woman, said tonight, Mrs. Sydnor learned that her husband was already married to a Richmond woman and that the couple were not divorced. This precipitated the quarrel which resulted in the agreement to separate, according to Rainey, who added that Sydnor had once threatened his wife with a razor and that he had himself reported that fact to the police.

Mr. Rainey said that his stepdaughter had recently returned to the home of her mother. Her husband came to Richmond from Columbus, Ohio, Saturday, he said, and on that afternoon had a long conference with Mrs. Sydnor, after which the daughter informed her mother that they had agreed to separate. Sydnor then left with the understanding that his wife was to meet him later for another talk. At that time he had in one of his pockets a large wrench, Rainey said.

When her daughter did not return home that night, Mrs. Rainey feared trouble and Mrs. Sydnor was not located again until her body was found this morning.

The collision occurred in the Vestfjord, between the Lofoten Islands and the Norwegian mainland.

GEORGIA TO AWARD DIPLOMAS TODAY

Athens, Ga., June 17.—(Special.) With the dedication of the Alumni World War Memorial hall this afternoon, everything was in readiness for the graduation of 200 students of Georgia university at the closing exercises of the 124th annual commencement here tomorrow. Judge E. H. Calloway, of Augusta, will deliver the baccalaureate address.

Hundreds of visitors are here for the picturesque exercises, which attract people from all over the southland. The 1924 commencement has been one of the most colorful ever held by the university with the social gaieties, alumni reunions, dedication of the war memorial hall and the Phi Beta Kappa address occupying prominent places on the program.

Walter G. Cooper, of Atlanta, is the valedictorian of the class and the other senior speakers are Miss Esther Bush, Athens; Charles L. Padgett, Boston; Delacey Allen, Atlanta, and Colquitt Carter, Atlanta.

Elect Alumni Officers.

At the morning session of the alumni officers elected in the mail voting were announced. Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of Marietta, was elected president of the society. He is of the class of 1892-93 and succeeds Allexander L. Lawton, of Savannah.

Other oficers named are: First vice president, A. Pratt Adams, class of 1899, Savannah; second vice president, Dr. William L. Moss, 1901, Athens; third vice president, E. Kontz Bennett, 1916, Waycross; recording secretary, Sylvanus Morris, 1874, Athens; treasurer, W. O. Payne, 1900, Athens.

Members of board of managers, three-year term, to succeed Harry Hodgeson, Harold Hirsch, 1901, Atlanta; for three-year term to succeed H. H. Swift, Walter Cothran, 1897, Rome.

Trustees ended their sessions Tuesday after voting to ask $50,000 of the legislature for the purpose of improving Lumpkin Law school.

The board also authorized the athletic association to erect a basketball pavilion on the campus, but without cost to the university. It is understood that the association has plans under way to finance the building.

J. E. Drewery was advanced by the board from instructor to adjunct professor in journalism; U. H. Davenport from associate professor to full professorship in the school of electrical engineering; C. J. Bockman from instructor to adjunct professor in chemistry; G. M. Broadhurst from instructor to adjunct professor in the school of commerce.

HAROLD HIRSCH.

A new committee to be known as the "committee on faculty" was created by the board at the Monday session.

Thanks Atlantans.

Trustees adopted resolutions of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hirsch, of Atlanta, for their contributions to the Alumni Memorial hall in fitting out several rooms.

A resolution of thanks was extended to the board of roads and revenues and the people of Clarke county for the bond issue and building of the John Milledge dormitory on the campus.

A report of the committee on research, consisting of L. G. Hardman, Dr. Joe Jacobs and George Foster Peabody, was made. Papers were presented citing members of the alumni who have attained prominence in the field of science.

Dr. Joe Jacobs, of Atlanta, presented a portrait of Mrs. W. H. Felton, of Cartersville, the first woman United States senator. The portrait was accepted and a vote of thanks extended the donor.

Anderson Speaks.

Students today were urged by W. D. Anderson, of Macon, to "speak up for their state" when pessimists were around with their gloomy observations. Mr. Anderson delivered the annual alumni oration.

Reviewing resources and assets of the state, Mr. Anderson urged that these be advertised instead of talking "hard times." At the same time he pointed out some of the needs of the state and declared that no time in the history of the world has there been "such opportunity of service and such an insistent call for men who are capable of rendering service to their fellow-men and have the will to do so.

"There is a spirit of pessimism abroad in Georgia today," Mr. Anderson declared. "Go where you will, in almost any crowd, you find, talk of hard times in Georgia.

"God never made a pessimist; he is either self-made or the son of Satan.

"I suggest that on every occasion you take the trouble to point out that although the south's cotton crop, formerly our money crop, has shrunken, we are still alive to tell the tale, and Georgia is very far from being a bankrupt state.

Finances Improved.

"For the past half century, we of the south have been a debtor people, and we have been forced to go elsewhere to borrow our money, but now there is plenty of money in Georgia belonging to Georgians to finance any business conducted along intelligent lines, or to promote and finance any safe enterprise which we care to launch."

The class of 1874 held its reunion, with Chancellor David C. Barrow and Dean Sylvanus Morris as its central figures.

Banquets, barbecues and luncheons were on the schedules of various reunionists. All of the reunionists wore the special badge of their class or the Red and Black, university colors.

ORLEANS HOSPITAL RESCINDS ORDER ON BOBBED HAIR

New Orleans, June 17.—Nurses with long hair were scarce today at Charity hospital here where a dozen of them were suspended recently because they had bobbed their tresses. Officials of the institution have rescinded the anti-bob rule.

It all came about as a result of a voluminous petition setting forth that the hospital was a stable institution and would endure even though the nurses shook the burden of their tresses and lightly trod the wards in shingles. The petitioners likewise averred that bobbing was so customary a girl with long hair actually attracted attention on the streets and no girl desired to attract attention.

STATE SANITARIUM IS NEGLECTED, REPORT

The condition of the state sanitarium for the insane, particularly its fire hazard, demands immediate attention by the state legislature, is the statement made in the report of the institution by the state audit department, submitted Tuesday to Governor Walker by S. J. Slate, state auditor.

"The fire hazard, particularly the lack of fire escapes, is regarded as a danger to life not longer to be neglected," says the report.

The sanitarium is inadequate, its financial condition is unsatisfactory, due to lack of funds for operation, and the general assembly should immediately move to remedy the deplorable condition, the report points out.

The annual appropriation of $800,000 per year is totally insufficient to maintain the institution, it is stated, and each year there is a large deficit. Non-payment of last year's deficiency appropriation of $239,864.68 is largely responsible for the large deficit at present.

Failure of the legislature to appropriate funds for completion of the new nurses' home, on which $139,000 already has been spent, is causing heavy loss to the state, it is reported.

Big Balance Due.

The report, which covers the period from January 1 to April 30, inclusive, shows that $542,522.22 has been received in the general fund, and that a balance of $10,528.31 remains on hand to run the institution until the close of the fiscal year, June 30.

The per capita cost per day is .644 cents, according to the report, which is considered lower than the average of similar institutions. The net operating cost of the sanitarium for the period designated was $316,141.78.

The total deficit on April 30 was $329,536.04.

Officers' salaries for April, taken as a typical month, were $5,318.20, and the wages of other employees ranged as follows: Eight receive from $100 to $125 per month; 53 receive from $75 to $95 per month; 129 receive from $50 to $75 per month, and 447 receive from $15 to $45 per month.

Suit for $20,000 damages for alleged false arrest was filed Tuesday in the superior court against A. Schulte, cigar dealer, by S. J. Bradley. According to the petition Bradley was arrested April 16 by an employee of Schulte, who, it is set out, followed him from the store, covered him with a pistol at Marietta and Broad streets, and charged him with being the man who had staged a hold-up in the store.

The petition says Bradley was released and that the alleged hold-up was admitted later by two Macon boys. Petitioner is represented by Attorneys Audley M. Lane and Sidney Smith.

Policeman Found Dines Postured On Single Leg

Los Angeles, June 17.—The picture of Courtland S. Dines, scion of a Denver family of wealth, standing on one foot trying to put on his shoes after he was shot at a lively New Years' eve party, was drawn for edification of jurors and spectators Tuesday at the second day of the trial of Horace Greer, whom Mabel Normand called her "driver."

The portrait was sketched by Patrolman A. W. Stoll, stolid officer of the law, but an artist in description none the less. In the background he sketched Miss Normand and Edna Purviance, the film actress, who were guests of Dines on the fateful New Year's afternoon when Greer, imbued with the heroic impulses of a modern Lochinvar, entered the Dines apartment without being invited and broke up the party.

Stoll First To Arrive.

Stoll was the first disinterested person to reach the scene. He found Dines, posed like a Geek god, grieving over his injuries, and trying to put on his shoes, the officer said. Shirt, underwear, trousers and other natural accoutrements of the man about town were scattered around, careless-like.

The officer was most solicitous as he spoke of the girls in the case. They were in fitting and proper attire, he said, and hovered near Dines, in concern over his injuries.

He said he took Miss Purviance and Miss Normand to the central police station.

Denies They Were Drunk.

"Isn't it a fact that these ladies were so drunk they couldn't give a coherent account of the shooting?" Defense Attorney S. S. Hahn queried.

"No, no; oh no," replied the officer in disgust at the suggestion.

"Well, they were feeling pretty spry, wern't they?"

But Stoll wouldn't admit they were "feeling pretty spry." They had been drinking, he agreed, but were certainly not intoxicated—perish the thought.

HOOPER ENTERS RACE FOR ASSEMBLY SEAT

Announcement of his candidacy for the legislature from Fulton county was made Tuesday by Frank A. Hooper, Jr., Atlanta attorney. Mr. Hooper declared he was in favor of retaining the present gasoline-tax law and favored biennial sessions of the legislature.

Mr. Hooper issued the following statement:

I wish to announce my candidacy for one of the three places as representative of Fulton county in the general assembly, subject to the democratic white primary of next September.

If elected, it is my intention to serve the interests of the people of Fulton county and of the state to the best of my ability and I shall try to serve all classes and interests fairly and impartially. All measures looking toward the industrial or educational development of our state will receive my earnest consideration.

In my opinion, our legislature is seriously hampered by the large number of bills under consideration at each session, such volume of bills preventing proper consideration of the most important measures. For this reason, as well as for economic reasons, I heartily advocate and if elected will support the proposed amendment to the constitution of our state, substituting biennial for annual sessions of the legislature.

The people of this county have overwhelmingly expressed themselves as being opposed to the fee system for county officers, and I should feel it my duty, in this as in all other matters, to give effect to their expressed wishes, by advocating the salary system for such officers.

I am in favor of preserving our present gasoline tax for the betterment of our roads. I favor strict economy in all departments and the saving of every cent of our taxes from waste. Georgia's finances are in no condition to justify the waste of a dollar. I believe our schools should be kept up to as high a state of efficiency as possible.

I shall appreciate the vote and support of the citizens of Fulton county.

ONE GEORGIA BOY TO BE GIVEN TRIP TO BATTLEFIELDS

Governor Clifford Walker has received an offer from the Georgia Society of the City of New York to defray the expenses of one ex-service man on the first of a series of tours arranged in France for former members of the army.

America will sail from New York, the return trip to be made on the Leviathan. Each tour will give the ex-service men from two to three weeks in France. Other tours will start from New York August 2, August 16 and August 23.

SENATOR WM. J. HARRIS.

Under the recently adopted rules the entries for the statewide September primary will close next Saturday, June 21, at noon.

Senator William J. Harris, who was first elected to that office in 1918, will stand for reelection in this primary, his term expiring on March 4, 1925.

At this writing no one has qualified as an opposing candidate for the senate and it does not appear that Senator Harris will have opposition.

The Constitution unhesitatingly expresses the hope that he will have no opposition. Indications point strongly to his reelection in the face of any opposition that could possibly develop and the people of Georgia are hoping to escape, this year if possible, the bitterness and strife that a personal or factional campaign for the United States senate usually carries.

Not only is the press of Georgia almost solidly behind Senator Harris, a condition of newspaper unanimity that is as significant as it is unusual, but the old political factions of the state are united in his support to a most heartening degree. That perhaps is best illustrated by the announcement that ex-Senator Hoke Smith will advocate the reelection of Senator Harris. He has been most of the time in Washington during Senator Harris' incumbency and has had opportunity to watch his work at close range.

It is a most hopeful indication when Georgia's political factions unite behind a candidate, and in this instance it is encouraging to assume that it portends a better and more tolerable situation in the political life of the state.

The record of Senator Harris clearly entitles him to reelection—and without opposition. He has been continually and always faithfully "on the job." He has not only advocated, but been most resourceful in securing legislation of a constructive nature for the farmers, particularly those of the cotton belt, and his specific work in the interest of the Georgia pecan growers, fruit growers, peanut growers, etc., is outstanding. This is true also of his deep and resourceful interests in the former service men. Indeed as an advanced member of the senate appropriation committee and as a working senator who is relied upon for much of the committee work in various capacities, including the special and conference committees, Senator Harris has attained a position of great usefulness, not only to Georgia, but to the nation.

He is what is known in Washington as a "working senator," that is to say one who depends more upon actual accomplishments for a constituency than upon oratory or political foot-balling upon the senate floor.

In this respect both Senator Harris and the state of Georgia, represented by him, are to be congratulated.

RESERVE RATE CUT.

The federal reserve board in Washington announced Tuesday a reduction in the rediscount rate in the Atlanta or sixth district bank, from 4 1-2 per cent to 4 per cent.

This is in line with other discount rate reductions recently announced in the eastern districts, although there is not a uniformity of rates maintained, as there should be. There does not appear any sound reason why the banks of the first district, to illustrate, should be allowed to rediscount their customers' paper at 3 1-2 per cent, while, even with the new rate effective today, the southeastern banks must pay 4 per cent. Of course all commercial rates to customers are based, primarily, upon the rates of rediscount that the banks must pay. If members of the Boston and New York regional banks can get the rate of 3 1-2 per cent, as prevails, why should the members of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank pay even 4 per cent? That is the question.

At any rate, the cut in the Atlanta rate is welcomed, and it necessarily reflects a heartening condition of business, in that it indicates easier money and increased liquidations, both of which are healthy business indications.

STATE AUDITOR'S REPORT.

The first report of State Auditor Samuel J. Slate, made to the governor and the assembly, is published in part in today's Constitution.

There is general statewide interest in this report, for the department was only established on February 1, having been created by an act of the extra session of the assembly in November last.

The report fully justifies the contentions of the proponents of such a department showing, as it does, that disbursements in the state have at last been placed upon a systematic business basis and that by keeping at all time a thorough balance between authorized appropriations and available funds prevents much needless embarrassments and effects many economies.

Perhaps the strongest feature of the system is the enforced auditing of the state departments. Mr. Slate, in less than five months of incumbency, has already audited about twenty of the state's departments and institutions. And in some he has established a new system of accounts, thus making the financial records of the state conform to modern methods, rather than to drift along in the archaic methods of generations ago that were in vogue in some of the institutions.

The department being new and untried, the auditor has very correctly given careful study to a series of proposed laws that will strengthen, facilitate and otherwise prove helpful and economical in the conduct of the department and in getting the most effective service from it.

To illustrate, Mr. Slate advocates important changes in the system of drawing warrants and enters carefully into a detailed discussion to show the force of his viewpoint. He advocates the creation of a central purchasing agent and shows conclusively what the state can save by having the various departments coordinate in this particular. He advocates the system of having all funds collected under the authority of the state paid into the state treasury and there disbursed under the general plan.

Another recommendation is that appropriations should be made more in detail and especially until such appropriations come under a budget system—that is to say appropriations should be intelligently differentiated instead of included in a lump sum, as frequently at present.

A great many other important recommendations are made, notably a more modern method of handling school warrants, carrying an increase to the governor's borrowing power to meet these temporary emergencies.

The report of Auditor Slate is a comprehensive one and shows his absolute familiarity with the work and his earnest efforts to serve the state well in his new capacity. Certain it is the state of Georgia never had a more worthy nor conscientious public servant than he.

"Why is a railroad crossing anyway?" is the question the speeding motorist asks—if there's life enough left in him after the limited train is through with him.

When the G. O. P. fellows make-believe they're "talking out in meeting" they're merely sawing wood and saying nothing.

We have good reason to cheer up—having pulled through the first, tenth and fifteenth of this financial month.

Man's a curious animal. It sometimes takes him a whole week to celebrate the finding of a dollar bill in an old, discarded vest.

It does no harm for a man to think he's running the government, if they don't let him slip into some little old office and act that way.

In view of the springless weather we have had, we should now gratefully sing, "Keep the Sun-Fires Burning."

Most people are in favor of taking the "sun-cure," except it be in the furrows of a ten-acre field.

The campaign-song poets should be given an office—if that would hush them.

Left-over platform planks will hardly do for material with which to build better homes.

"The president has had enough of congress," says The Philadelphia Record—which makes it unanimous.

A Mountain Town Veteran.

(W. B. Townsend, in Dahlonega Nugget.)

We met Uncle Joe Edwards here Thursday of last week, who tells us that he will soon be ninety, and helps to plant corn. He is not in such a financial strain that causes him to do this, but does it for his health. Uncle Joe was born in a house located on what is known as Brick Yard Hill, near town and has seen some lively times in and about Dahlonega, long before autos were thought of, and many people went to meeting and courting in an ox wagon, church at night dimly lighted up by a few home manufactured candles. All the congregation then were dressed alike. The women wore linsey dresses, and the men breeches made from jeans manufactured on the looms by the mothers and sisters. And then when lovers went to the spring for water and the gourd was in use, girls drank water from the brim of their sweethearts' hats. Oh, how good!

Georgia Has Everything But Two Arctic Oceans

Editor The Constitution: There are only two things in the world worth mentioning that Georgia doesn't possess—the Arctic and the Antarctic oceans.

Georgia contains all the southeast except an ornamental ruffle to the north called North Carolina and a rosette of flowers on the south called Florida.

It is bounded on the east by the Atlantic ocean, and the heat of the gulf stream furnishes the warmth to the Pacific to keep California from freezing to death.

Under the mountains of north Georgia there is so much gold that the war debt would not equal the interest on its value.

Above it lies most of the sky and all the major constellations, and where the moon is brighter by night than the sun is in daytime elsewhere.

Georgia is so big that the sun in ten million years has never been able to cross it in less than one day. At night it is always ready to set.

In Georgia it takes nine months for its governor, its senators and its representatives to reach the capitol after election.

A map, in order to convey any idea of the size of Georgia, would have to be tattooed on the hide of a sperm whale and the holes of the eyes would be enough for the rest of the United States.

If all the hogs in Georgia were one fair-sized hog it could root California into the ocean in one crack of its tail and his squeal would make the thunders and roars of Yosemite sound like a jaybird pipping its egg shell.

If all the steers in Georgia were one big steer he could drink out of the Atlantic and brush the killilu birds off the Golden Gate with his tail.

Georgia has enough timber and horses to supply chariots and four for all of California's risen dead on the resurrection morn and have enough left to convey the mourners.

If California could suck as hard as she blows she would drain the Pacific ocean and follow her Moses into a new Promised Land.

Practical Christianity.

Fifteen years they labored without a single convert. Right in the heart of the oozing jungles and the dense forests that cover the death plateaus of the Upper Congo, where sleeping sickness destroys both men and beasts. Two missionaries of the German Lutheran church, alone, unarmed, unwilling witnesses of cannibalism, Heu-Heu worship, stark terrorism, black magic and voodooism. Though they lost courage at times they never lost faith. Then they got hold of some of the new anti-sleeping sickness serum. With that they brought new hope in that terror-stricken region, where more than a million people have died during the past year. One evening two months ago, the missionaries, Dr. Erhardt and Pastor Buhle, saw the natives massing in the sacred clearing by the light of the moon. There was a wild screeching chant, a dance and then they came over to the bungalow in their thousands. The missionaries thought the last hour had come. But imagine the surprise and joy of the missionaries when the chiefs heaped up their war clubs, their spears and assegays. "WE GIVE JESUS OUR LIVES," said the chiefs. "HE HAS SAVED US FROM THE SLEEPING DEATH." That was a conquest for Christianity, magnificent step toward civilization. And the cause? Science and religion combined.

Japan and India.

Rabindrahath Tagore, great Bengal poet, tells a student audience in Tokio that "Japan and India have a common cultural heritage." He regrets that Japan is suffering under an indignity inflicted by the American people. He also pictures Japan as the leader of civilization of the Orient and he denounces western progress which is based on "materialism and greed." Now if it be true that Japan is the leader in the Far East, we need to examine her methods, which are derived and run a close parallel with western methods. So that in reality M. Tagore is praising western civilization. As to the ties of unity between India and Japan. If the English should ever decide to withdraw from the huge empire, it will be a signal for civil war and slaughter in India. And in the confusion the little yellow man, the leader of Oriental civilization, will jump in and answer the call of destiny, which is in his estimation the hegemony over the whole Orient. What will that rule be like? Ask the Koreans and Manchurians. They know the Japs.

Calls England Proletarian; My Lord!

In reference to the request of the Russian mission in London to remove the ashes of Karl Marx to Moscow, Jean Longuet, grandson of Marx and deputy of the French parliament, has written Premier MacDonald, of Britain. His letter is an interesting document that does more toward discrediting bolshevist claims of orthodox socialism than all the combined screeching slanders and hysterical vilifications of certain newspapers. "I do not believe that Marx would ever have accepted the Muscovite type of communism. In all his writings there was a deep-seated suspicion of all things Russian, especially Russian methods and Russian thought. This does not apply only to czarism, but also the revolutionary schools of Bakunin and Kropotkin. Though Marx would have had great admiration for Lenin, nobody will dare to say that bolshevism is the outcome of the Marxist philosophy." M. Longuet hopes that Marx's bones will remain undisturbed in the cemetery of Hampstead, "in the noble soil of the great proletarian democracy across the channel." How about that last definition of England?

"Coworkers With God."

Sculptors carve their works of art in clay and marble. The plastic surgeons work with human tissue. Dimensions for new noses, new faces are carefully worked out. At the medical association's conference in Chicago, motion pictures were shown of horror after horror. Faces eaten away or blown away were shown, built up, remodeled. The audience of doctors broke into cheering when a picture was flashed on the screen of a gray moustached man, whose nose, once totally gone, had been replaced and his face and his forehead, once a thing of terrible destroyed tissue, sculptured into the form of humanity again. That is something to cheer about indeed. Rebuilding human beings. Co-workers with the Creator Himself. WHAT A PITY THERE ARE FORCES IN THIS WORLD ALWAYS PLANNING MORE MUTILATION, BY DEATH RAYS, POISON GAS, LIQUID FIRE AND OTHER ELECTRICAL AND MECHANICAL TERRORS.

Break-Up of British Empire.

British newspapers, both Conservative and Liberal, foresee the breaking up of the British empire. They attach more significance to the American-Japanese embroglio than we ourselves in these United States. They argue that the time will come when Britain must assume the role of peace maker between America and Japan. If it ever comes to hostilities, the British papers feel certain that the British dominions will not hesitate to rally to the aid of the United States. That's true. Australia and Canada share the views of America on exclusion of yellow aliens. Because they are unassimilable. The feeling that grave events will eventually take place in the Orient is becoming more general. Lord Burnham, great English newspaper owner, once wanted this writer to go to Shanghai and cover Korea for Reuter's agency. "Mighty events will take place there in the Pacific within ten years, a terrible war and you'll be in it," he said. The prospect of war was not alluring.

Latin Sentiment.

Something becoming more prevalent in European legislative assemblies. General hubbub, excitement, catcalls, cheering, fights, threats of violence, challenges to duels. So it was last week in the Italian chamber. The din and uproar was deafening. Papers and books hurled through the air. Then a silent figure mounted the speaker's tribune. All became silent, the noise died down, calm returned. The man on the platform was Emilio della Sante, armless veteran and blind. On his breast glistened the golden cross of valor. While he spoke every deputy and every spectator in the gallery and Premier Mussolini remained standing. That was a tribute to Della Sante's valor. He could not see it. But that made the tribute the more beautiful. "These Latins, Messieurs, have some rare sentiment," said Von Moltke once.

Dr. Hardman Favors Bond Issue For Educational Purposes

Editor Constitution: I read with more than ordinary interest your editorial on the needs of the University of Georgia, which includes all the branches of this institution.

The question is: How are we to get the money for the needs of this institution? We send committees year after year from the board of trustees of the University of Georgia to the legislative body asking for appropriations for maintenance and buildings for this great institution. With the exception of a very meager appropriation for maintenance, we do not get anything. The building program is absolutely ignored.

Perhaps most of the members of this body are favorable to the development of the state through this institution, but we haven't the money, and no plan is provided for securing it.

If it were available, unquestionably this institution would be cared for. Appropriations made without funds with which to pay them are worthless work and expense. Under present conditions we can not secure money by this method, or, if we should, it would mean an increased burden of taxation, for which the people will not stand.

Then what is to be done? This institution must get it under a new plan, or continue, as it has for almost a hundred years, in great need of money to provide for the education of the youth of our state.

We could get the money through a bond issue, and yet without increasing the burden of taxation. Give her a $5,000,000 bond issue, to be distributed over three years, $1,000,000 to the University of Georgia, $1,000,000 to the Technological School, $1,000,000 to the Agricultural college and the other $2,000,000 divided among the Normal schools at Athens, Milledgeville and Valdosta and the medical department at Augusta. This would relieve the situation for at least 50 years, and put new life in the educational interests of Georgia.

I also noticed in the same issue of your paper an article which advocated a bond issue of $75,000,000 for the highway department. No one can question my interest in the highway commission and the public roads of Georgia, since, together with your chairman of this department, I introduced the bill to create this department, and I would not have this department think that in any way I would oppose highway development.

However, the people of Georgia today will not vote a bond issue of $75,000,000 for highways, and it is too much at one taime to give to any one department of the state.

It is said that this can be secured without any cost. The statement as I understand it however, carries with it a tax on gasoline, and a tax is a burden from whatever source it may come.

I would suggest: (1) That if such an issue were submitted to the people it would not carry. (2) That it would be a tax burden. (3) That it would be putting too many eggs in one nest. (4) That the statement that it would not cost anything is misleading. (5) That the plan to get something for nothing is not new, but it has not yet become legal in Georgia.

I make these statements not in a spirit of criticism, but for the interest which I have in highways and in good roads.

I believe that the plan which I have suggested for the three great departments of this state would carry. The gasoline tax could be added later as a supplementary measure, if it were wise.

The next and most important thing, and the foundation of the State University and good roads, is the country section, from which this state builds the cities and furnishes the patronage and students for the university and the citizens who travel on the good roads. The future progress of every interest is based upon the life if childhood, from which the strong citizens must come. From the country come the children, and also the foodstuffs and raw material for manufacture, and, indeed, the sources of all the principal commodities that must develop our state as a whole.

Then provide for a bond issue of $5,000,000, for the purpose of providing in each country county four fireproof school buildings, which will give the children an opportunity to receive an education. This will eliminate from our state the criticism which comes by reason of our seventy thousand illiterates, and will give to every child, many of whom will not have an opportunity of attending college, a chance in life.

This foundation must be the basis of a bond issue if we carry it. Without it, our university, our common schools, and our children and citizens will continue to suffer.

With these bond issues there will be given to Georgia new life in every endeavor, which will develop our state as never before. This can be done, and yet reduce our taxes.

L. G. HARDMAN.

Unique Collection Method Of Civil War Times

(Bridges Smith in Macon Telegraph.)

"The concern of Roberts, Dunlap & Co. being somewhat demoralized, our senior and Co. being in the hands of the doctors, and our middle man in the army, makes it absolutely necessary that those who owe us should settle without delay. We have some half-bushel, more or less, of due-bills given for cash and goods, payable in bacon, pork, corn, wheat, etc. We have no time, talent or shoe-leather to waste in running after these claims. We want money (not gold or silver) but Confederate money and we want it at once. Our store is full of goods, and we are anxious to sell for something to eat."

HOUSTOUN R. HARPER IS HERE ON VISIT

Houstoun R. Harper, formerly connected with the Piedmont hotel, and more recently in the hotel business in Omaha, Neb., is spending a few days visiting friends in Atlanta. Mr. Harper was connected with the Piedmont hotel from the time it opened until 1910, when he went to Chattanooga to manage the Hotel Patten, and will be remembered by many Atlantans He recently sold his two Nebraska hotels.

Commenting on conditions in the middle west, Mr. Harper stated that the business situation is very poor and that farmers, especially, are suffering. He states that drastic measures are necessary, as farmers are receiving only pre-war prices for their products, and in return must pay double prices for articles purchased by them.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

IODINE IN TABLE SALT.

A year or so ago I threw all caution, judgment and professional propriety to the winds and printed here a formula for a kind of old age procrastinator, a medicinal iodin ration, which I had lifted from a contribution in the New York Medical Journal by Dr. Adoniram J. Quimby, who, in turn, had brushed everything aside and opined that the daily consumption of a wee speck of iodin as in the formula he gave would postpone hardening of the arteries, graying of the hair and premature loss of ginger and ambition. Dr. Quimby praised his iodin mixture as a remedy for the business man, the w. k. tired business man who has tried a "rest" or a "vacation" without recovering his old time pep. He urged it for the condition called "staleness." So I grabbed the recipe while it was hot and rushed it into this column, and do you know, the response was something startling. I never would have believed so many people want to stay young and not grow gray. The unfortunate part of it was that so many old geezers whose eyesight and understanding were not what they once had been, jumped to the conclusion that I had found a prescription to cure old age, a simple rejuvenator one could "mix for himself," in short, the thing which Ponce de Leon couldn't find.

In spite of all that I haven't changed my mind about the value of a suitable iodin ration for keeping one in the game. My faith in the value of iodin as a food medicine is quite as firm as it was when I broadcast Dr. Quimby's formula. But I want to revoke that formula now. In fact I did revoke it quite a while ago, answering all requests for it with the general suggestion that ordinary tincture of iodine (iodin is simplified spelling) in homeopathic doses and the more liberal use of sea foods in the diet would answer the requirements. To make doubly sure of this I do now solemnly revoke the formula, prescription or recipe which I ascribed to Dr. Adoniram J. Quimby in February 23, 1923, under the title "Get Your Iodin." Dr. Quimby's formula is still just as good as ever, and I am only revoking it for general use among my readers, for the reason that everybody can now obtain iodin in the right form to meet the requirements of the body in the table salt which everybody uses in seasoning and cooking.

Some such salt was proposed several years ago by Dr. Emory R. Hayhurst, professor of hygiene in Ohio State university. The apparently increasing prevalence of goitre prompted the Michigan State Medical society, the Michigan state board of health and the West Virginia state board of health, and other medical societies and health authorities to urge manufacturers to market a table salt containing the proper infintesimal quantity of iodin to oppose and prevent goitre. Such a salt is now on the general market, procurable from good grocers anywhere, at the usual price of free running salt. It contains 0.02 per cent of sodium iodid, and tastes and looks like ordinary salt.

I recommend such salt as an excellent means of providing the necessary iodin ration.

PATRONS PROTEST PLAN TO LOCATE NEW JUNIOR HIGH

Decision on locating the Hoke Smith Junior High school was deferred until July by the board of education Tuesday after a delegation of Hill street elementary school patrons had appeared to protest against use of that school as a nucleus for the junior high.

Some arrangement will have to be made during the summer to accommodate approximately 600 new seventh grade pupils for whom there are no seats in the present quarters of the school, in an annex to Commercial High school.

BOARD TO DEFER HISTORY ADOPTION UNTIL JULY MEET

Adoption of a United States history for the junior high schools was deferred until the July meeting by the board of education Tuesday. Miss Elizabeth Hannah, national chairman of school and text books for the United Daughters of the Confederacy, appeared at the meeting to protest against adoption of the Gordy history. She was informed that the book had never been considered by the board and would not be adopted.

Franklin Citizens To Hold Annual Meeting on Friday

The Franklin County society will hold its annual picnic at Grant Park, Friday, June 27, beginning at 11 o'clock, it was stated. All former residents or descendents of Franklin county citizens are eligible to membership, and their friends in Franklin are invited to attend this annual picnic, provided they will bring well-filled baskets, it is stated. A number of games and stunts will be staged, including an old-fashioned town-ball game, a fat men's foot race, a bald-headed beauty contest, an old fiddler's contest, tug-of-war between married women, swimming contests, and interesting games and stunts for children.

This picnic has been an annual affair of the Franklin County society for a number of years, and it has been the occasion of renewing old friendships and the bringing together of hundreds of former residents of the county who live in Atlanta and vicinity.

B. Dixon Hall is president of the society and Mrs. J. W. Queen, of Decatur, is secretary. Mrs. Queen and Mrs. J. O. Norris have charge of the arrangements for entertainment and refreshments.

DIVORCE INCREASES

Fulton Jury Acts on 56 Cases in One Day.

Coming close to the record for one day's grind, verdicts in 56 divorce cases were granted in Fulton superior court Tuesday.

A jury in Judge George L. Bell's division of the court signed 31 first verdicts, 22 second verdicts and 3 verdicts removing disabilities of litigents in divorce cases.

Counting first and second verdicts, there is an average of 1,000 divorce verdicts in Fulton county yearly.

ATLANTAN PASSES AT LOCAL HOSPITAL

He is survived by his widow, two sons, W. A. Cummings, of Detroit, and D. E. Cummings, of Atlanta; a brother, Charles Cummings, of Watertown, Mass., and a sister, Mrs. Archibald Childs, of Boston, Mass.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

New York, June 17.—Subway travel during rush hours has become so dangerous that New York now has an anti-subway crush squad that looks out for the weak and defenseless at such pivotal points as Grand Central, Brooklyn Bridge and Times Square.

The squad is composed of picked athletes from the police department who know how to beat back the surging waves of struggling humanity making for subway doors. New York at the rush hour is devoid of all manners and consideration. It wants to get home and get there quickly.

Sturdy rowdies who indulge in this recklessness go on the theory that no matter how full a car may be there is always room for half a dozen more. It is a biff-bang crew that tosses women and children aside as straws to get seats for themselves.

The subway has its own flying wedge that attempts to resist the shoving at rush hours, but it was considered inadequate. Now the shovers, under the disorderly conduct law, are being arrested, fined and in some cases sent to jail.

Nothing is so impressive of Manhattan's bigness as the subway rush. In the stations there are 10-car express trains every minute and eight-car local trains every two minutes—and still the crowds cannot be taken care of.

Hundreds of thousands stream down through the kiosks hoping for a chance to get home in time for dinner. The race is only to the strong—and old men and young girls must wait until the stronger men have taken their places in trains.

No football scrimmage is more exciting at times than a battle between the flying wedges of passengers and the special officers picked to resist them. They clash in a pulling, pushing, cursing mass. Hats are broken, clothes are torn and noses are blooded.

The Fakirs' ball ended this year in a riotous outburst that brought police reserves. Not even the old East Side dances where each guest brought his own sawdust and recesses were called at intervals to mop up the blood touched it. It was the most disorderly crew of rowdies the town ever beheld. The offenders were mostly young college boys steeped in drug store gin. They went through the hotel where the ball was held, breaking in on sleeping guests, destroying furniture and cutting up bed linen. The Fakirs' is a ball given by artists. The guests come lavishly costumed. Very bizarre costuming is aimed at and of course that attracts the sight-seers. After the ball was over, 31 overcoats were found in hallways, 16 silk hats smashed beyond repair and more than two dozen had to seek medical repair for bruised eyes and cracked heads.

Name of a dog! Gaston is in again. Each year Gaston comes to New York from his dear Paree—oo, la la! He stops at the smartest hotel and wears high-heeled red-topped shoes, a green straw hat with a plume in the side and ribbon bow knots in his cuffs. Gaston is one of the most successful salesmen for a perfume house. His New York dinners are about the smartest in town. He is to Broadway what the old time wine agent used to be, save he is a little more lavish. He makes most of the present crop of spenders seem miserable tight wads.

They have been trying to elect a mayor of Broadway. Of course it is an unofficial job, but it will in a measure designate who is the most popular person along the Dazzling Gulch. So far Walter Kingsley, who is the Keith press agent, is leading all contenders.

State Press Continues To Support Harris

Deserving of Indorsement.

(From The Athens Banner-Herald.)

Georgia has had in the past a number of able representatives in the United States senate who have reflected credit upon their state and made for themselves records which are living today on the pages of the history of this state. None, however, rendered more conscientious service or accomplished more for the interest of the state than has William J. Harris, the senior senator from Georgia.

The people of Georgia will act wisely in returning him to the senate without opposition; he has earned their support; he has made a faithful servant; he is entitled to the support of the people on his unblemished record as a man and as a representative in the highest councils of the nation—the United States senate.

An Unusual Record.

(From The Augusta Herald.)

The unusual record made by the senior senator from Georgia, William J. Harris, has, in the opinion of The Herald, precluded any opposition to him. Although some talk of opposition has been going around, it is not believed that it will materialize.

His incumbency of five years has marked for him a brilliant and well-ordered path, and he will ask Georgia to send him back to Washington because of that record. The voters of this state should, and will send Senator Harris back to the senate.

His service and ability has not only been recognized by the democratic administration, but even under a republican administration he has been given some of the most important committee assignments. If he is returned to the senate he will be given a number of other important committees carrying with them the chairmanship.

The Farmer's Friend.

(From The LaGrange Reporter.)

Senator William J. Harris—still "Bill Harris" among Georgians—has not climbed upon the capitol dome in Washington to broadcast his achievements during his years in the United States senate. He has applied himself diligently, without ceasing, to the task of finding ways to serve his people; and he has served them.

If we had to describe Senator Harris' attitude in congress we would merely say that he is not the enemy of any class, but he is the FARMER'S FRIEND. His record of service to the farmer, as well as in the fair and just interest of every other class of American people, suggests a description of that kind.

A Hard-Working Ambassador.

(From The Macon Daily Telegraph.)

Senator Harris has completed the first five years of his term in the senate. He is a member of the appropriations and immigration committees. He has proven a diligent and useful senator to the state. Possibly no other senator in the history of the state has maintained closer personal relations with the people of Georgia than Senator Harris. He has no machine; he is not the agent of any faction or group—he is a hard-working ambassador for his state in the halls of the United States senate.

Staggering Cost of Rain To Georgia Highways

Editor Constitution: It is gratifying that so many prominent Georgians are discussing, through your columns, the bond proposal for paved roads in the state. The advocates of the measure are cognizant of the fact that views pro and con will help to arouse thought and for one I do not permit adverse criticism to discourage me for you remember that there are "books in running brooks, sermons in stones and good in everything."

Permit me to state that every time an inch of rain falls in Georgia it costs the people $60,000, and as there is an average of 50 inches annually you see that the cost amounts to the staggering sum of $3,000,000. Half of that amount is spent yearly by the highway commission alone and the other half by the counties who are doing their own road building with convict and other labor. The cost is due to scraping, road rolling, cleaning out ditches and opening debris-choked culverts after every rain. Occasionally I see a printed statement in your columns that paved roads wear out in about ten years. There is a heavily traveled concrete road here in Atlanta on Andrews drive that has been laid down fourteen years and has never had a cent spent on it for repairs and has not needed it. There is another mile of concrete road now ten years old between Griffin and Experiment which has not needed repair except that done soon after it was laid which was due to the expansion joints being too narrow, causing it to "buckle;" since then it has splendidly withstood the enormous traffic between here and Macon on the Dixie highway, the most largely traveled 100 miles in the state. It is well to know as much as possible about the subject you undertake to discuss in print and every one who really wants good roads will welcome a sane and unheated expression of views. It is also not a bad idea to get at the motive for opposition. It is barely possible that some fellow's business might be hurt or even destroyed if they did not have the opportunity to sell something at a good profitable retail price to individual counties and not the state at large, such as road building machinery, etc. As the politician used to yell, "Watch the line-up!"

There is a concrete road up in Massachusetts now thirty-eight years old and still bearing up under tremendously heavy traffic which according to the authorities costs only $72 per mile per annum to keep in fine order and that cost is due to "shoulder cracks," but road builders are beginning to learn that our hitherto despised Bermuda grass is being used to bolster up these shoulders.

LABOR TO NAME ITS MAN TONIGHT FOR LEGISLATURE

A meeting of importance to all members of organized labor in Atlanta will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock in the Labor temple, when representatives of all local organizations will gather for the purpose of selecting a candidate to the general assembly from Fulton county.

This is the first direct effort that has been made, it is understood, by labor unions of Atlanta to nominate a candidate for the state legislature, and the movement will be watched with interest. The candidate selected to bear the banner of organized labor is expected to have somewhat of an advantage over opponents in that he is promised the solid backing of something like 15,000 voters, who will be called upon to give their indorsement to the labor candidate.

The meeting tonight was authorized by a motion adopted last Wednesday evening. The call included all labor unions in the city—those affiliated with the Atlanta Federation of Trades, the standard railroad unions and others.

Damage estimated at $1,500 was caused by fire of undetermined origin Tuesday afternoon in quarters occupied by warrant officers at Fort McPherson. The blaze was extinguished by soldiers at the post with the assistance of one engine company from Atlanta.

DIXIE HIGHWAY PLANS GIVEN NEW IMPETUS

Formation of a Dixie highway chapter in every city, village or county through which the highway passes is called for in a resolution adopted by directors of the Dixie Highway association. The resolution was introduced by J. Stacy Hill, vice president and director for Ohio, at the annual meeting of the association in Savannah.

The purpose of these chapters, as set forth in the resolution, will be to advertise the Dixie highway; to co-operate and assist the highway association in its work to complete the highway; to stimulate travel both in the north and south; to properly mark the Dixie highway and necessary detours during construction; to assist various counties in keeping roads in good condition and beautifying the highway, and see that tourists are properly treated by merchants, hotels and garages.

The resolution calls for election of an advisory board and any officers necessary for each chapter, specifying that each chapter must be composed of at least 25 members and that the dues of members shall be $5 annually. Any member, the resolution says, who shall pay $50 to the treasury of the Dixie Highway association shall be relieved from further solicitation of funds by local chapter, and shall be known as an honorary member.

25 LOOTED SACKS FOUND AT JOLIET

Chicago, June 17.—The $3,000,000 loot obtained by train robbers who last Thursday night held up a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul mail train at Rondout, Ill., is in the possession of two men whose names are known and who will be arrested within 24 hours. A. E. Germer, chief postal inspector in charge of the investigation, announced tonight.

His statement followed the finding today near Joliet, Ill., of one of four automobiles used by the bandits and more than 50 of the 61 registered mail pouches obtained by the robbers in the most daring holdup in railroad history.

Mr. Germer also announced that some of the train robbers are included among six men and two women now held by the Chicago police.

Only 10 Bandits in Gang.

At the same time Morgan A. Collins, chief of police, announced that the names of the robbers are known to the police, that there were not more than ten bandits implicated and that those not now in custody will be arrested soon. He said latest estimates placed the haul at approximately $3,000,000 in securities, negotiable and non-negotiable, and $70,000 in cash.

Michael Hughes, chief of detectives, said the robbers obtained 61 mail pouches and that 55 have been recovered, including those found near Joliet and one found the day after the robbery. The six missing sacks, he said, were probably used by the robbers to carry away the negotiable loot.

Carl Fontana Arrested.

Chief Hughes said all the prisoners held by the police will probably be turned over to the federal authorities tonight or tomorrow when hearings on writs of habeas corpus for the release of three of them are scheduled in federal court.

The latest suspect to be taken into custody is Carl Fontana, leader of a notorious Chicago gang and who was held for a time in connection with a mail robbery at Harvey, Ill., and as a suspect in other crimes. Mr. Germer said that mail clerks who saw the bandits will be asked to try to identify him.

A farmer living near the place where the automobile was abandoned discovered the mail pouches after his curiosity was aroused as to why the automobile had been left in a field since Sunday. He notified the Joliet civil authorities.

Eight Others Held.

Others in custody are "Dr." Spencer Brown, James Murray, former Chicago politician who posed as J. Mahoney when arrested; Paul Wade, said to be a former aviator of Tulsa, Okla.; J. H. Wayne, found with five bullet-wounds in his body and believed by the police to be the bandit wounded in the holdup; J. H. Watson, said to hail from Oklahoma; a Miss Mead, of Milwaukee, whom Watson summoned here to secure $20,000 to buy his freedom, and Walter McComb and wife, the raiding of whose flat resulted in the arrest of several of the suspects.

Have No Confessions.

"We have no confessions," Chief Collins said tonight, "but we have plenty of information. And, what is better, we have some of the robbers in cells. The solution of the robbery is near."

Mr. Germer said tonight that all the mail pouches taken in the robbery have been recovered. He added that about $100,000 in securities, most of them non-negotiable, also had been recovered, these securities either having been discarded by the robbers or being in pouches which they did not even trouble to open.

The postal inspector said he attached no importance to the arrest near Joliet late today by federal agents of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Horton and Frank Horton, proprietors of a road house. He said he did not believe they knew anything of the robbery.

BATTLESHIP'S REPAIRS ARE ALMOST COMPLETE

Norfolk, Va., June 17.—The battleship West Virginia, which grounded in the lower Chesapeake early yesterday while proceeding to Brest on a shake-down cruise, still was at anchor in Lynnhaven Roads tonight undergoing repairs to a condenser head. Reports to naval sources ashore indicated she would proceed on her way tomorrow.

The destroyer Osborne was detailed by the navy yard to carry several welders to the ship. Today ship mechanics and a navy yard force were preparing the condenser for the welding process, which will complete the job.

While sailing through the Thimble Shoals channel, the West Virginia sucked mud into her condensers, causing the head of one to break. It was necessary to shut off the ship's power, and being helpless she drifted into soft mud, floating later with the tide.

HEATER EXPLOSION INJURES YOUNG DUKE

Gordon Duke, 22, manager of the filling station at Luckie and Spring streets, Tuesday night was nursing minor cuts and bruises as the result of an explosion of a gas heater in the office of the station early Tuesday morning, and which came near costing him his life.

So intense was the shock of the combustion that windows and doors of stores situated in the vicinity were shattered and glasses broken out.

The cause of the explosion was given as accumulation of gas, which Duke is reported to have permitted before attempting to light the heater.

MUSSOLINI ACTS, CRISIS ABATING

BY FRANCISCO REA.

Rome, June 17.—Premier Mussolini has tightened his grip on the internal situation, and the crisis is apparently abating.

A shift in the cabinet, shake-ups in the police department, and the arrest of five men in connection with the kidnaping of Deputy Matteotti have eased tension throughout the country. There is growing conviction that the premier is resolved to conduct a full investigation into the supposed slaying of the socialist deputy.

Commander Filippelli, editor-in-chief of the Corriere d'Italiano, was arrested near Genoa Tuesday when attempting to escape from Italy in a motor boat. A nationwide search was made for the fascist journalist after it was found that the kidnapers of Matteotti used Filippelli's card to obtain an automobile at a garage here.

The editor was brought back to Rome and lodged in jail, where the state prosecutor immediately began to question him. It is reported that important documents were found on Filippelli, and that they are likely to throw considerable light on the crime.

A reporter on the Corriere d'Italiano was arrested simultaneously with Filippelli, while Albino Volpi, charged with being one of Matteotti's slayers, was arrested near Milan. Two other arrests have also been made. Police on the northwestern frontier are watching for Commander Rossi, wanted in connection with the crime, who may attempt to escape into France.

The Roman press remarked that since the Matteotti case has been taken out of the hands of the police, the investigation has moved more swiftly and with more satisfactory results.

BAKERS OF SOUTH IN GREAT COMBINE

Charlotte, N. C., June 17.—Announcement of the formation of a $20,000,000 corporation, to be known as the Southern Bakeries company, to operate bakeries throughout the south, was made here today. Harry D. Tipton, vice president of the United Bakeries company of New York, is president of the new organization, which was formed under the laws of Delaware.

H. O. Miller, president and owner of the Carolina Baking company, with bakeries in Charlotte, Greensboro and Gastonia, is vice president and general manager of the concern. Other officers include R. W. Miller, Charlotte, vice president; W. B. Shumaker, New York, secretary treasurer.

The Carolina Baking company of Charlotte and the Stone Baking company of Atlanta, Ga., have been secured by purchase as the first units of the new concern. Options have been secured on a number of bakeries already established in important cities of the south, it was stated, but names were withheld. Other units will be built, it was said.

Management of the Stone Baking company, of Atlanta, which has been purchased as one of the first units of the new concern, will not be affected to any appreciable extent by the new deal, officials declared Tuesday. F. O. Stone, president of the company, will continue in his present capacity, as will others of the present officials, it was stated. The new organization is to be an association of bakeries under a central management, it was said.

No other local bakeries have been merged as yet, it is understood.

RECORDER FROWNS ON LATE VISITING; FOUR ARE FINED

Arraigned before Recorder George E. Johnson, under charges of disorderly conduct growing out of their visit to a house in East Georgia avenue about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning, two young couples were assessed fines of $16 each, with the admonition from the court to do their visiting at more seasonable hours.

The defendants gave their names as Pearl Roberts, 19, of West Roper street; Mrs. G. M. Murphy, living at a downtown hotel; L. A. Caldwell, 22, of East Georgia avenue, and W. T. Hames, 19, living on Hill street.

They were arrested by Call Oficers N. P. Barker and R. E. Carroll, who were called by residents of East Georgia avenue, who thought the quartet were burglars. They tried to escape through windows and rear doors when the police arrived, it is claimed.

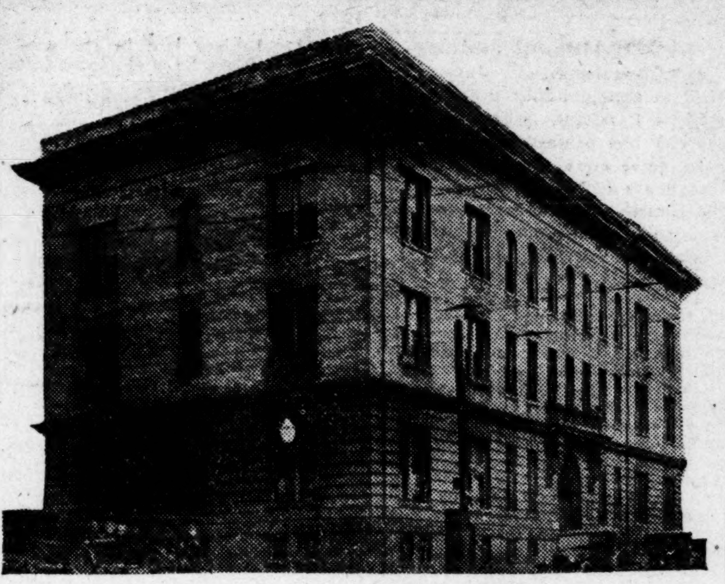
Apartments Are Converted Into Dentsits' Building



Wellington apartments, which will be remodeled and prepared for modern offices for a score of prominent Atlanta dentists.

The handsome Wellington apartments, corner of Houston and Ivy streets, have been taken over by the Southern Dental Syndicate, and, according to the Logan Realty & Trust Corporation, agents for the structure, will be remodeled and developed into a modernly equipped and appointed dental building.

The improvements on the building, which will involve several thousand dollars, will begin within a short time, it was stated Tuesday by James L. Logan, and when ready for occupancy, it will be one of the finest and most completely equipped office buildings of its kind in the country.

"In offering space to about 20 of the leading dental surgeons of the city," said Mr. Logan, "the first feature that will be brought to their consideration will be that of a saving of something like one-third of the rental they are bound to pay on high-class offices today. This will be effected by a cooperative plan which also will enable those taking offices in this building to become owners of their space within a short term of years."

In talking of the improvements that are to be made, Mr. Logan stated that the entire building, which is to be the first unit of at least two to be erected exclusively for dentists, will be devided into the most modernly appointed professional offices possible to build. The entire interior of the building will be of white tile and the electric and hydraulic connections and mechanical apparatus will be of the most approved types.

The building also will have special telephone service, a large laboratory permitting all dentists in the building to have mechanical work done by a splendidly appointed central laboratory and a large sales room for dental supplies. There will be an office and reception room for specialists of various branches of medicine and surgery whose services may be required for dental patients.

A well-known banking institution will become trustee of the fund invested in the enterprise and the James L. Logan Realty & Trust Corporation will be agents for the syndicate.

TUBERCULAR PATIENT GAINS NINE POUNDS IN 28 DAYS

The Remarkable Qualities of a New Tonic and System Builder Is Testified to By a Denver Man

Charles M. Blevins, of Denver, Colorado, has the following to say about "Haelan," a new blood tonic and system builder.

"I have been a sufferer from pulmonary tuberculosis and catarrhal trouble for more than seven years. My weight had fallen from 150 pounds to 130. I was cold and chilly all the time, my nervous system seemed to be shattered and my sleep was broken by constant coughing. After using 'Haelan' for 28 days I am getting to be myself again. I HAVE GAINED NINE POUNDS in weight, the cough has almost entirely disappeared, I sleep soundly and feel more refreshed each morning. I can eat most any kind of food and the remedy has warmed and built me up in general."

"HAELAN" is a liquid compound discovered and perfected by an Austrian student of medicine in the University of Vienna, Austria. Since it has been on the market in this country, it has met with remarkable success. It builds up the general health, strength and power of endurance, especially in cases of "flu" victims; corrects stomach and bowel disorders, stops pains in the chest, stops coughing; purifies the blood and promotes a robustness of constitution which throws off the germs and bacilli which cause pulmonary tuberculosis, besides bringing about other benefits.

"Haelan" is sold under a rigid money-back guarantee backed with a deposit of $1,000.00 in the American National Bank of Denver, from which any just claim for refund will be paid.

Intensely interesting booklet, testimonials that will be a revelation, etc., will be mailed FREE on request by the General Remedies Co., Dept VII., Loop Bldg., Denver, Colo.—(adv.)

From Pig Iron to Pompano

From pig iron to pompano, from shoes to satsumas—the Louisville & Nashville Railroad transports practically every known commodity and luxury from the places where they are plentiful to the places where they are scarce; thus adding to the comfort, as well as to the profit, of both the shipping and the receiving communities.

These figures showing the freight tonnage handled by the L. & N. in 1923, are interesting and instructive: 1,600,000 cars of freight—4,380 cars a day; 57,460,190 tons of freight—157,425 a day.

The reader may form some idea of the practical service being rendered to the American people by considering the articles and commodities of every-day use from the viewpoints of where the raw materials come from and where the finished products are made ready for the consumer.

Look about your home or your office; turn the subject over in your mind when you sit down to dinner today. How many of the necessities and luxuries of life would be yours without the modern transportation systems of America—the finest and most efficient in any country on the face of the globe?

CONFEDERATE CHILDREN OPEN ANNUAL MEETING

Albany, Ga., June 17.—(Special.)—The 12th annual conference of the Georgia division, Children of the Confederacy, at a meeting here this morning heard reports of the growth of the organization throughout the state.

Mrs. Anna Bryant Lane reported for the scholarship committee. She stated that from a night school started in 1912, which began with an enrollment of 14, the committee has been able to place 87 boys and girls in college and many others in high schools. There is a scholarship in every college in the state and some outside of the state, she said.

Mrs. Frank Harrold, of Americus, president general of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, urged those present to remember the "sacredness of their purpose to keep American citizenship high by endeavoring to further Christian education and by perpetuating and inculcating within their hearts and lives the ideals of the south."

MOVES FOR DISMISSAL OF ANTI-BONUS SUITS

Washington, June 17.—A motion to dismiss the two suits filed in the district supreme court attacking the validity of the soldier bonus act was entered today by Secretaries Mellon, Weeks and Wilbur and Director Hines, of the veterans' bureau.

The government officials maintained that the act was a valid and constitutional exercise of the power of congress and its payment could not be enjoined by the court. It had been attacked by Benjamin Catchings, a New York attorney, and Joseph Whelefs, a war veteran. Catchings charged that the law was political repayment by members of congress to their constituents, and Whelefs denounced it as class legislation.

BRUNSWICK FISHERMAN SLAIN IN STREET ROW

Brunswick, Ga., June 17.—(Special.)—Captain J. N. Brock, 60, well-known fisherman at this harbor, died at a local hospital this afternoon, the result of wounds received last night when he was shot by Red Westberry, the shooting taking place in an alley in the rear of Brock's residence.

Reports of the fatal afray last night, indicate that bad eeling had existed between the two men for some time, as a result of Westberry, who is married and has a family, paying attentions to a granddaughter of the deceased. Although warned, it is said that Westberry continued his attentions to the young woman.

Last night Brock was seated at his home when Westberry passed, and securing a shotgun, he emptied it and then went into the alley and met Westberry. Words were exchanged and Brock struck Westberry with the gun. The latter pulled his revolver and proceeded to empty it, witnesses declared. Two of the bullets took effect, one striking him in the abdomen and the other in the cheek.

At first it was thought that he had not been seriously wounded and he was not taken to the hospital until this morning, when his condition became serious. Westberry made his escape last night, but surrendered to officers this morning, saying that he shot in self-defense.

Brock had resided in Brunswick all his life and had operated prawn and fishing boats. He is survived by a large family.

U. of Washington Wins Intercollegiate Boat Race

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 17.—Held to their work by a belligerent, red-haired midget, who hollered a cheerful line of invective through a horn, eight beefy young men walked three miles down the ruffled bosom of the Hudson river Tuesday afternoon, winning the intercollegiate eight-oar rowing championship again for the University of Washington.

They finished two lenghts in front of the University of Wisconsin and the foremost of the eastern crews was Cornell, which came splashing over the line third.

Pennsy's boat, her blue and red-tipped blades scuffing sprays of water in a weakening stroke, slid across the theoretical line which marks the finish in fourth place, although it had been expected that Washington and Pennsylvania would fight for the championship with the rest of the boats trailing away toward the rear in a struggle to avoid the ignominy of finishing last. Syracuse university, after a long, game pursuit overtook and passed Columbia in the last half of the ordeal and took fifth position, so the blue and white spoons of the Columbia ship floundered to the end in the sixth and last place with three of the eight men crumpled on the floor of the shell, whipped and exhausted.

Crowd Cheers Winners.

As the race ended, the waddling old side-wheelers which had held ranks near the finish, broke from their formation and paddled excitedly about the river, bellowing with their sirens and waving a thousand pennants from their halyards. The great crowd which had formed ribbon of color on the platforms of the flatcars which made up the observation train, came pouring down the ladders and rushed to the river bank cheering the Washington men.

There were only a few to cheer for the panting young men in the second boat because Wisconsin had been out of the inter-collegiate for ten years and was thought to have sent an inexperienced crew to this race to start a gradual renewal of her old position on the ripples. Therefore when Wisconsin, after rowing back in fourth position for more than a mile, irresistibly moved up and passed Cornell and Pennsylvania, there were few on hand who had a real sentimental appreciation of the victory.

Washington's time was nothing to boast of, and there were critical easterners along the river bank who wished to record their opinion that the Yale crew, which probably will go to France as America's Olympic crew, could have rowed a coal-barge to victory against the field.

13:33.6 Is Record.

The record for the course is thirteen minutes thirty-three and three-fifths seconds, established in 1922 by the Navy crew, the same crew that Yale defeated last week on the Schuylkill at Philadelphia in winning the right to represent America on the lagoon in the Olympic games.

Washington, winning with a narrow space of open water between her stern and Wisconsin's bow, took fifteen minutes and two seconds for three miles, and little Don Grant, the coxswain of the western scow, said after the race that his shipmates didn't have anything left for a fight after the two-mile mark.

Grand is the captain as well as the navigator of the Washington shell, a rare office for the diminutive vocalist, who sits in the stern and entertains the oarsmen as a rule by telling that he holds them in low esteem and devoutly hopes that none of his friends are on the bank to see him in such dismal company. He is a freckle-faced tawny-haired sliver of a boy only five feet three over all and weighing only 118 pounds as compared to Stroke Sanford, pulling No. 3 oar, who is six feet four and weighs 170.

Luft Watches From Cot.

On the sun porch of Vassar hospital, near the river bank, and not far from the finish, Max Luft, Washington's regular No. 4 oar, lay on a cot watching the boats streak over the choppy water. He has typhoid and was taken from the boat to the hospital a few days ago just in time to miss participation in the greatest victory of his last season in the boat. Homer Kerns, of the junior varsity, was impressed into the crew of the big ship in Luft's place, and the man who had defended his sweep against the challenge of the scrub all season could only squirm on his bunk and wish him well.

After a few delays they finally broke away with Washington just a yard or two in front of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the theoretical form.

Columbia was a quarter horse. The blue blades stirred the Hudson in a swift beat for about two miles and the New York boat ran third to that mark. But when Cornell's prow came nosing up to challenge both Columbia and Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin, which had taken no previous part in the fighting, asserted a belated desire to be concerned in the struggle. Columbia could not meet the challenge and slowly slid back until even Syracuse, whose colors had been splashing along behind the field, moved up into fifth place and tossed water at the pupils of Fred Miller.

Ceremony After Race.

There was no great ceremony after the race. The fainting men were doused with handfuls of water by their shipmates and revived in time to paddle back to the float. The excursion boats and yachts got into a traffic jam and fought their way into line for the drop down stream to New York. The special trains waiting on the siding loaded up and hauled away, and the ferries began to float other thousands of hot, exhausted and thirsty people back to Poughkeepsie for the getaway.

It was Washington's successive winning of the intercollegiate, but it happened that this race was a walkaway for the giants of the Pacific coast and Wisconsin's unexpected hike into second place late in the game was all that saved the spectacle from monotony.

Washington's boat was manned as follows:

Bow, Dutton.
No. 2, Roland France.
No. 3, Stork Sanford.
No. 4, Homer Kerns.
No. 5, Hal Condon.
No. 6, Dow Walling.
No. 7, Fred Spahn.
Stroke, Al Ulbrickson.
Coxswain, Don Grant.

Babies Drowned, Husband Suicides In Family Rows

Bristow, Okla., June 17.—Marie Williams, 1, and Alfred Williams, 3, children of J. W. Williams, a railroad worker, were drowned in a lake and Lee Conner, 35, an oil field worker, shot himself to death, here today as a result of what officials declare was a domestic difficulty in two separate homes here today.

Mrs. Williams was rescued from the lake by a man who saw her struggling in the water. Police quoted her as saying she threw the infants in the water and plunged after them.

Conner's wife attributed his death to a "love quarrel."

Police found a message written with soap on the top of a dresser in the Williams home, stating that the bodies of Mrs. Williams and the children would be found in the lake. It was unsigned.

A third child of Mrs. Williams told police she saw her mother throw one child into the water and then jump in with the other in her arms.

Tate Is Winner From Marietta

Tate, Ga., June 17.—(Special.)—Led by Cy Hawkins, the strong Tate team took the fast Marietta outfit into camp here this afternoon by a score of 4 to 1.

Although the Cobb county aggregation outhit the local boys they were unable to make the hits count for runs. Henderson would always tighten at the needed time.

"Lefty" Willis pitched nice ball for Marietta with the exception of the sixth inning, when bunched hits pushed over the winning counters.

CRACKERS SLUG WAY TO 8-TO-7 VICTORY OVER VOLS

Anderson-Flowers Fight Plans Receive Setback

New York, June 17.—(Special.)—Complications, dark and forbidding, have suddenly loomed out of space and ensnared Walk Miller's plans to promote a fight in Atlanta on July 3 between Lee Anderson, colored light-heavyweight champion of the world, and Tiger Flowers, the Georgia sensation, who last Saturday night whipped Joe Lohman for his fifth straight victory here.

The trouble arises from the fact that Miller's contract for Anderson's services was made with Willie Gibbs, who just last week had Anderson taken away from him by the Leo Flynn combination, which is completed by Arthur Yende and Bob Smith. This managerial board has advised Miller that Anderson will not go to Atlanta for the original terms, contending that he is already matched for July 4 in a New England ring.

Miller has remained over in New York and will protest the affair to the New York boxing commission in an effort to have that body force Anderson's new managers to carry out the contract. Should the commission rule in favor of Miller the latter will guarantee Anderson the same amount that he would have received for the New England bout.

Should the decision go against Miller he will attempt to get Jack Taylor, Battling Siki or Panama Joe Gans in Atlanta to fill the engagement with Flowers. Both Gans and Siki have refused offers to meet Flowers, but Miller believes that a higher financial offer will bring one of them around.

Olympic Team Trains En Route

On Board Steamship America, June 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—The American Olympic team, taking advantage of excellent weather and a smooth ocean, got down to real training today with the athletes testing their sea legs in morning and afternoon workouts. There was a colorful scene of activity, the runners circling the promenade track, boxers and wrestlers at work in the rings, gymnasts performing their acrobatic turns, swimming utilizing the special tank and oarsmen at the machines.

All the men are in fine condition except Loren Murchison, who is recovering from an attack of tonsillitis and will keep quiet during the voyage. Matilda Shurich, the 13-year-old swimmer, the youngest athlete aboard, was the only victim of seasickness.

Three stowaways came to light today, including L. Layton, of the University of Nebraska, who was determined to join the team despite his shutout in the 400-meter hurdles in the Cambridge trials Friday. He was given a tentative berth as spare man.

Cliff Markle Is Sold to Yankees

St. Paul, June 17.—Cliff Markle, of St. Paul, one of the leading pitchers of the American Association, will report to the New York Yankees at Cleveland on Thursday, it was announced today by the management of the St. Paul, which last night sold him to the American league leaders.

Markle was the property of New York in 1920, but was sold to Atlanta, of the Southern association. Atlanta sold him to Cincinnati Nationals and he came to St. Paul early in 1923 in part payment for Rube Benton.

FORD'S FAMOUS RACER IN EXHIBITION RACE

Los Angeles, June 17.—The famed old "999," racing car, first automobile built by Henry Ford, holder of many world's records from 1902 to 1904 and the mount which first brought fame to Barney Oldfield as a racing driver, will be piloted through an exhibition run at Ascot speedway here Sunday.

CRACKERS AND VOLS PLAY TODAY

After taking four of the five games played in Nashville, the Crackers and the Vols will arrive early this morning to resume play. The first of the four games scheduled will be played this afternoon, starting promptly at 3 o'clock at Spiller's field.

Roy Moore, the star of the recent series, will probably be "Boss" Niehoff's selection in the box this afternoon. Niehoff, who failed to accompany the squad to Nashville on account of the illness of his wife, will once more take over the managerial reins.

The Crackers at present are only six and a half games behind the league leading Memphis Chicks. The schedule between now and July Fourth is in their favor and many predict that they will once more be fighting for the leader's position at that time. The squad is about to get in shape once more.

The two teams will play here until Saturday.

Mrs. O'Brien Leads Field in Western

Chicago, June 17.—Champions and former champions tonight had to acknowledge a new leader in the medal championship play of the women's western golf association, for Mrs. Howard O'Brien, of Indian Hill club, Chicago, took the lead in today's play with 85 strokes, one over par for the Glenview course. Two more 18-hole rounds are to be played to determine who shall succeed Mrs. Lee Mida, of Chicago, as western medal champion.

Mrs. O'Brien's good score was only one stroke ahead of that returned by Mrs. Elaine Rosenthal Reinhart, of Dallas, formerly western champion, while Mrs. Mida and Mrs. Dave Gaut, of Memphis, formerly western and southern champion, were tied at 89 for third position. Mrs. J. W. Taylor, of Chicago, was next with 90, and only 13 others managed to keep under 100.

Four favorite players failed to answer when their names were called, but owing to the difficult course, it is doubtful if they would have taken the lead against an 85, although they were no less persons than Glenna Collett, formerly national champion; Edith Cummings, present national titleholder; Mrs. Melvin Jones and Mrs. Fred C. Letts, former western champions.

In spite of a seven on the sixth hole, Mrs. O'Brien went out in 41, two strokes better than par, and she came home in 44 although she had two sixes. Mrs. Reinhart was even better at times than the leader, for her 86 included a seven and four sixes.

Mrs. Gaut started the best of the field, getting three pars and birdie, but she had much trouble at the eighth, taking nine strokes. She was better coming home, her 42 being the best score of the day on the second nine.

Marston Loses Match to Gardner

Philadelphia, June 17.—Playing almost perfect golf, W. H. Gardner, of Buffalo, today eliminated Maxwell R Marston, national amateur champion, from the Lynnewood Hall cup tournament at the Huntingdon Valley Country club in the second round. Gardner won four and three, thereby advancing to the semi-finals. It was the first time the champion had been defeated in an important tournament in more than a year.

Other semi-finalists are G. V. Rotan, Houston, Texas; Maurice Risley, Atlantic City, and D. C. Corkran, Philadelphia.

Marston was beaten by the same brand of superlative golf that he displayed in lowering the course record with a 67 on the round of the qualifying test.

Gardner was slightly out-driven by the straight-shooting champion, but he more than made up for this disadvtntage with phenomenal approaches and deadly putts.

CUBS BEAT PHILLIES.

Philadelphia, June 17.—Although outhit three to one Chicago defeated Philadelphia today, 6 to 5. The Cubs made only four hits but they took full advantage of the poor playing by the Phillies. Five errors and eight passes to Chicago batters were too big a handicap for the local sluggers to overcome.

Miss Wills Quits Roehampton Meet

Roehampton, June 17.—Interest in the Roehampton invitation tennis tournament, which has been marked by a string of victories won by American women stars, was lulled today when Miss Helen Wills, the American champion, scratched in the doubles due to a slight indisposition and a desire to rest in preparation for the team matches tomorrow and Thursday at Wimbledon.

Miss Wills and Mrs. George Wightman will not participate further in the doubles at Roehampton, as it will be impossible to hold up other matches from Monday until Friday in order to enable Micss Wills to continue.

The American women entered in the Roehampton tournament singles have the upper half of the draw all to themselves. These four places are held by Mrs. George Wightman, Mrs Marion Z. Jessup, Miss Eleanor Goss and Mrs. Molla B. Mallory. One of these four will enter the finals on Saturday.

Playing on a firm, fast grass court, Mrs. Mallory approached her best form this afternoon in defeating Miss Lillian Scharman.

Earl Smith Fined.

Little Rock, Ark., June 17.—Earl Smith, catcher of the Boston National league club, was fined $20 in federal district court here today for violation of the migratory bird act. Smith, through his attorney, entered a plea of guilty.

Roy Moore Continues Great Work at Bat and Crashes Out Double To Score Needed Run

Nashville, Tenn., June 17.—(Special.)—The Crackers made it three straight and four out of five when they took the last game of the series from the Vols, 8 to 7. The two teams departed tonight for Atlanta to resume the series which is to wind up on Saturday. The Crackers continued their slugging, piling up a big lead off Johnny Enzmann, who was sold to Buffalo and then recalled after the Vols had used six pitchers in Monday's double-header. The Vols fought an up-hill battle, several times having a chance to win but always failing in the pinch.

Alten appeared in the eighth with runners on second and third and two out. Acting Manager Bill McCabe wanted to supplant George Dumont with Benny Karr, but the former begged and obtained permission to pitch to Alten. He threw him three curve balls and the Nashville pitcher-pinch hitter lofted to Paschal.

A great stop and throw by Fred Graff at the expense of Red Smith cut off a Cracker run, while Hawks robbed Dick Burrus and thus saved two runs. A double steal which was broken up also cost the Crackers another counter.

Moore Continues Hitting.

Roy Moore continued his great slugging, getting two doubles, a single and an intentional base on balls. The pass loaded the bases with one out and the strategy worked, for Enzmann thereupon struck out both Paschal and Burrus.

So torrid became the debate over the whiffing of Ollie Krehmeyer in the seventh that Lee Mackey was blasted out of the box score by "Bulldog" Williams. So bitterly did James Hamilton grumble over the unsigned passport for Bob Murray that he, too, was urged to join Lee Mackey in a refreshing shower bath, Freddie Graff did nothing of the sort. He slipped back to his territory at third base and remained right in the box score.

GOOD TIMES HAVE COME TO STAY

In 1890 all the electric lighting for Atlanta was furnished by a small company located on the railroad, back of the old First Presbyterian church. A very small portion of the streets were lighted with arc lights, while only a few of the business houses had electric lighting, and practically none of the residences. LOOK AT ATLANTA TODAY!

"The Lonesome Pine."

(At the Lyric.)

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" holds the same gripping appeal for people now as ten years ago when the song was on everyone's tongue and June Tolliver and John Hale, the lovers, were as well known as Adam and Eve. The crowds that have packed the Lyric theater for the first three performances of the play attest its undying popularity. Isabelle Lowe and Wilfred Lytell are June and John and will be each night this week and at matinees Thursday and Saturday.

"Here Comes the Bride."

(At the Atlanta.)

All that inimitable personality that Atlanta audiences have seen John B. Litel throw into his characterizations comes to the fore in his work this week in "Here Comes the Bride," the bright comedy hit being offered at the Atlanta theater by the Baldwin Players, with the result that Mr. Litel this week is doing some of the most enjoyable acting he has had the opportunity of doing since his return to Atlanta.

"That's My Wife."

(At the Forsyth.)

Jimmie Hodges knew what he was doing when he wrote "That's My Wife," the sparkling comedy hit being offered by his musical comedy company at the Forsyth theater this week, if laugh producing was his motive. For the play fairly bristles with clean humor and mirth.

The costumes, too, new and colorful as they are, are a big feature of this week's attraction. The chorus looks mighty pretty in their new dresses.

Mr. Hodges is the center of things from the very start, and that's one reason why there's never a dull moment.

Loew's Vaudeville.

(At the Grand.)

The Georgia Serenaders, Dixie's greatest jazz band organization, is proving the biggest hit of the season at Loew's Grand theater this week. Another big feature to balance the vaudeville headliner is the picture, "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," from the famous poem by Robert W. Service. The broadcasting of the vaudeville program by WSB, The Atlanta Journal's radio station, will be carried out tonight at 6:45. In addition to the headliner and the feature picture, there are four other splendid acts.

"Thy Name Is Woman."

(At the Howard.)

"Thy Name Is Woman" is a dramatic comet of the year. This new Fred Niblo production which is playing at the Howard this week has had the audience almost gasping for breath at the fire of its love scenes and the power of its climaxes. The acting and atmosphere were so vivid that every spectator must have felt as if he were being brushed by the comet's blazing trail.

The credit for this accomplishment rests on the shoulders of Mr. Niblo and his cast of players, the latter including such favorites as Ramon Novarro, Barbara LeMarr, William V. Mong, Edith Roberts and Robert Edeson.

"Her Temporary Husband."

(At the Metropolitan.)

A whole city co-operated in the production of "Her Temporary Husband," the First National farce comedy feature which is being shown at the Metropolitan theater.

Almost every man, woman and child in Long Beach, California, wanted to help in the making of this brilliant comedy. It was impossible to use every one of the 125,000 inhabitants of the town who volunteered to assist. However, Director John McDermott used more than 3,000 of its citizens in the big exterior scenes.

"Daughters of Today."

(At the Rialto.)

Today and tonight Manager W. T. Murray declares are very fine times to see "Daughters of Today," which is showing at the Rialto theater. The picture, showing the mad pleasures of the jazz-mad age of ours, is attracting such tremendous interest that it will probably be hard to find a seat at your convenience the rest of the week.

Several short subjects surmount a fine program.

At the Paramount.

(For Colored.)

Whitman Bennett's production, "Loyal Lives," which will be at the Paramount theater today, is hailed everywhere as one of the most human portrayals ever screened. "Loyal Lives" is the story of an unsung hero. It is the story of devoted, unflinching service. It is a tribute to the acme of loyalty. It is the story of the postman.

BURGLARS LOOT EDSEL FORD HOME

Detroit, June 17.—The disappearance of a box of jewels valued at approximately $100,000 from the home of Edsel B. Ford, president of the Ford Motor company, was announced today by Police Commissioner Frank Croul. The robbery, committed Saturday, was kept a secret by the police until today when they admitted that no definite clews had been developed.

The box contained a pearl necklace composed of 205 pearls with a platinum clasp set with a small diamond, valued at $67,000; a pearl necklace of 103 pearls with a diamond clasp, valued at $27,000; a platinum wedding ring and a guard ring encircled with one-eighth carat diamonds.

Commissioner Croul announced that the thief or thieves gained entrance to the home by climbing up a window canopy, forcing a window of a bathroom and then entering the room of Mrs. Ford.

SMUTS AND PARTY REPORTED BEATEN

London, June 18.—Analyzing the returns in the South African election, the London Daily News declares that both General Smuts and his party have been defeated.

Capetown, S. A., June 17.—General Jan C. Smuts, premier of South Africa, was defeated in his own constituency in the South African general election Tuesday.

He lost the constituency by 385 votes. Returns thus far received are insufficient to indicate the general trend of the voting.

Revised but still incomplete returns at a late hour showed that the South African party, led by General Smuts, had elected 20 seats and gained three. The labor party had elected 17 seats and gained eight, while the nationalists, led by General Hertzog, had elected ten and gained three.

The government's fate is hanging in the balance, due to labor gains.

'THE TORCH BEARERS' IS SPLENDID SUCCESS

Any individual who enjoys perfect satire will miss one of the choicest bits of satirical humor if they fail to see "The Torch Bearers." This play is being presented at the Woman's club auditorium twice a day, after a premiere on Tuesday night that was, in almost every sense, as perfect a success as its most hopeful sponsors could have wished. There will be two performances today, the matinee being arranged as a bargain affair, the regular price of $1.00 being reduced to 50 cents.

The play is given by the Theater Guild for the benefit of the Junior high schools of the city, under the sponsorship of the Parent-Teacher associations of the schools.

Probably the most striking lack of perfection last night was in the audience. They were highly appreciative, they rocked with laughter—it is comedy which really makes one roll and shake with unadulterated mirth. The presentation deserved a much larger audience.

Small Audience.

A vacant seat was a crime—and there were a number of them. But perhaps that is too harsh. Last night a vacant seat was a mistake—today it will be a crime.

This play, purest satire, is aimed at the peculiarities and ridiculous self-esteem of the little groups of would-be-actors who initiate "Little Theater" movements in their home towns, and whose chief personal characteristic is a marked superiority complex. They have the "Art—with a Capital A" fever, badly.

You can guess that it is clever and funny?

The performance last night was undoubtedly the best amateur thing ever done in Atlanta. It is impossible, in the limited space at command, to give the praise that is deserved to all performers. Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson is due much of the credit. She is producer and director of the presentation, and is due much praise for her own stage work in one of the leading roles. Next, perhaps, should be mentioned Mrs. Katherine Hillyer-Connerat. Either Mrs. Connerat was wonderfully well cast or else she is truly a marvelous actress.

Performers Praised.

J. O. Wood had the male lead and is almost as good a performer on the stage as in the legislature. Then there was Channing Cope. Mr. Cope is ambitious to be a legislator, having announced his candidacy. He, judged by his acting, is as good as Mr. Wood.

Henry McLemore did a splendid character bit, as did Bryan Collier. Mrs. J. Colquitt Meacham shared honors with the leads and J. Forsyth Gordy handled a small but "fat" part perfectly. Harriet Noyes was good, as were Mrs. John Gelzer, Jr., and Anne Hubbard.

The play is, as intimated, a joy. The fact that the Woman's club is rather far out on the north side ought, really, to assure packed houses twice today.

Prisoner's Plea for Mercy

:: BARBARA LA MARR MOURNED SPANISH COUNT ::

Bares Story of Love Murder

Los Angeles, Cal., June 17.—Barbara La Marr, screen actress and heroine of a half-dozen love episodes that led her to the altar and many others which did not, is the central figure in the story of California's latest supposed murder mystery.

Count Mario Escobar, rich in the noble blood of Spain but poor in worldly possessions, courted Barbara with a persistance that led to his destruction, according to the story told police by a prisoner in the county jail.

Morris Nodler, former newsboy, under sentence to San Quentin penitentiary, told the story which resulted in a search by deputies of the windswept cliffs of the Pacific below San Juan Capistrano. The body was supposed to be there. The searches returned Tuesday night and said they had found no trace of the count's body.

Nodler is in prison for highway robbery.

Pleading for immunity, he revealed to Deputy District Attorney Joe Ryan a murder story involving persons well known in Hollywood studio circles.

Some months ago, the authorities have learned, Count Escobar came from Spain to Hollywood, hoping to make his fortune in the pictures. He rented a small bungalow. He soon won favor in the hearts of many actresses in Hollywood—much more so than he did in the eyes of the casting directors. "Bits" and small parts were all Count Escobar appeared able to obtain.

But if his Thespian efforts were doomed to wither, his amours prospered. His small residence was soon dubbed a "love bungalow" by many actor folk in Hollywood—people who listen to stories of romances within their set with sly amusement, and whose motto is: "Live and let live."

Two months ago Escobar disappeared. Barbara La Marr grieved over his disappearance, her friends said. Several members of the film colony were questioned by police, but none appeared to know where Escobar had gone. In the manner of the transient ways of Hollywood residents and Hollywood hearts, the affair soon was forgotten.

This is where the story Nodler told the deputy district attorney joins on to what every one knew before.

On a dark night, Nodler said, he drove an automobile for two men. One was a former convict, a thug, perhaps he didn't know, while the other was a relative of Jack Daugherty, Miss La Marr's latest husband, very much devoted to his raven-haired bride.

The machine drew up in front of Count Escobar's house. The two men went in and soon returned, carrying the limp body of Escobar with them, Nodler said. Then a long trip to the heights on the Torrey Pines grade, below San Juan Capistrano on the road to San Diego; a pause, a lifting out of the body and a splash on the wave-swept rocks below.

The relative of Daugherty was closeted with a deputy district attorney Tuesday night.

Miss La Marr, who has stood with five different men and heard pronounced the words, "until death do us part," is in New York.

M'ADOO NOT WORRIED BY TWO-THIRDS RULE

Chicago, June 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—Whether the two-thirds nominating rule is replaced by the majority rule at the New York democratic convention does not worry W. G. McAdoo, presidential candidate, whose position on the subject is being widely discussed.

The candidate said so in most emphatic words while swapping yarns and acknowledging handshakes during a twenty-minute stopover in the smoky railroad yards southwest of Chicago today, the scene of his short reception here en route to New York.

"We can beat 'em anyway; two-thirds rule or by majority, so why should I worry?" Mr. McAdoo said. "And I don't say that boastingly. I am speaking on the facts. We've got enough to back us up either way."

Mum on Policy.

On any other features of his policy, platform or procedure, Mr. McAdoo was mum. "I'm not making any broad remarks. I'll take care of all that in my speeches. Anyway, my managers know better what it's all about. Ask 'em."

His Chicago manager, however, was too busy apparently with cinders, smoke and perspiration to add anything. Due to some confusion on the location of the "yards" where Mr. McAdoo was to be switched to an eastbound train, there were many anxious and sweltering celebrities tramping over blocks of tracks who required more immediate attention.

Mr. McAdoo's private car was added to a Baltimore and Ohio train, which was expected to reach New York about 2 p. m. Wednesday.

One of his supporters, noting the black band on Mr. McAdoo's left arm, inquired in an evident unthoughtful way "if he was wearing that for the republican party?"

"No," he replied, his face sobering from his broad smile, "that is for Mr. Wilson." Shortly, however, he beamed again, and added, "but I might be wearing it for that party soon. With the platform the republicans adopted I think, too, they have already hung crepe on themselves."

Tanned and Fit.

Another wanted to see "the next lady of the white house," but Mr. McAdoo suggested she wasn't attired. "We didn't think we'd get here so quickly. But look at the kids!"

Some of his assemblage took Mr. McAloo at his word and presumed "that the hat you have on is one you grabbed in a hurry." He was wearing a rather faded, green, slouch chapeau.

"Yes, in a way, but you know that is the hat I threw in the ring and guess I'd better stick to it." The candidate appears fit for any eventuality, tanned by the California sun almost to a nut brown. He said he was feeling "the greatest ever" and was anxious for the starting gun at New York.

"Whether it's to be a long race for the winner, I don't know, but I'm prepared," he declared.

"Broadway Angel" Attracts Crowds At Each Service

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Rheba Crawford, "Angel of Broadway," preacher, orator, lecturer—and a most delightful and personable young woman with it all—is packing the Central Congregational church, on West Ellis street, every night at 8 o'clock. Miss Crawford, one-time Atlanta Salvation army lassie, has returned to her old home with an international reputation as a speaker and Atlanta has found the reputation deserved. The crowd each service draws is proof of this.

This is probably Miss Crawford's last week in the city. Engagements which have been made for many weeks compel her to leave, though she would like to stay much longer.

There will be services, however, every night this week at the Central Congregational church. Tonight the famous negro spiritual choir of Big Bethel church will give a program of negro spirituals.

Miss Crawford's sermons have been called "mesages of humanity delivered in terms of Christianity." Whatever their correct appellation, they are effective. She creates her finished work on the most disappointing material that any artists can use—a human crowd. For the crowd disperses as soon as the work is completed, scatters into its component units and can never be gathered together again, exactly the same. The work, as a whole, is lost as soon as it is done.

And humanity, after all, is not a precious metal for the artist to work with. True, in the right hands, it can become very fine material, capable of receiving a marvelous impress and sometimes, streaked with veins of gold.

Miss Crawford works so with her audiences, and although the spell breaks with the final "Good night," it cannot be otherwise than that some of the purpose of the worker shall remain behind, to live forever, a thing of beauty to do silent homage to the hand that made it beautiful.

R. I. SENATE FLOOR IS SCENE OF RIOT

Providence, R. I., June 17.—A riot followed an attempt today by republicans to prevent Lieutenant Governor Toupin from presiding over today's session of the state senate. Men and women were trampled upon by the political combatants.

Republican and democratic senators clashed with spectators taking sides in a free-for-all fist fight.

The republican senators, backed up by deputy sheriffs, assigned to duty by High Sheriff Jonathan Andrews, arrived early for today's session. The chamber and galleries were crowded. While Lieutenant Governor Toupin, a democrat, was in the doorway of the senate lobby, Senator Arthur A. Sherman, republican, mounted the rostrum and called the senate to order. Immediately the senate was in an uproar.

Amid the screams of women and the cheering of partisans word was sent to Governor Flynn that a riot was in progress.

Meanwhile Sheriff Andrews took a place on the floor and succeeded in separating the combatants. Governor Flynn pushed his way through the crowd, mounted the rostrum and cautioned the disturbers.

AGREEMENT HASTENS LUMBER FRAUD CASE

Washington, June 17.—The prosecution at the trial of the alleged lumber fraud conspiracy case today shortened the length of the trial by several days and avoided the introduction of more than 35 witnesses by agreement with counsel for the defense in connection with a number of checks and drafts passing between John L. Phillips, of Georgia, and Frank T. Sullivan, lumber merchant of Buffalo, N. Y. Both men are on trial. The total of payments from Sullivan to Phillips under the agreement is given as $237,438.78.

Under the stipulation counsel for the defense admitted that the government can introduce witnesses, competent to testify, who would show that Sullivan's book account was charged with the checks and drafts in question, and that the checks and drafts were received by Phillips, who acted as selling agent for the government's surplus lumber.

In addition the government offered testimony showing a transfer of $49,000 from Sullivan's account at the State Bank of Kenmore, near Buffalo, to Phillips' account with a private banking firm in New York.

The prosecution claims that the total of these two amounts, $286,438.78, was a "secret" payment by Sullivan to Phillips.

The stipulation is expected to bring the case of the prosecution to a close tomorrow. The defense will ask for an instructed verdict and an extended argument on the motion is expected.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE IN PRIVATE HOME

An unidentified white man late Tuesday night walked into a private home on Peachtree street and, informing the astonished occupants that he had "come to live there," calmly entered a room and turned on the gas. The door was forced and the man was seized and held until policemen and a Grady ambulance arrived.

A tailor's union card, found in a coat pocket, bore the name of Peter Melton, but the man refused to give his name and would not discuss his attempted suicide. He was treated at Grady hospital and later carried to police station while efforts are being mae to locate relatives.

It is believed that the man is insane.

Former Atlantan Marries Wealthy Virginia Beauty

Richmond, Va., June 14.—Sidney Phelan Clark, of Chicago, formerly of Atlanta, who finished an academic course at the University of Virginia a few days ago, paid only $1 for a marriage license which he secured today for his marriage this afternoon to Miss Monica Frischkorn, local society girl. He was among the last who will get one at that price in Virginia. Monday the price goes up to $3.

Clark is a son of the late Stephen Willis Clark, of Atlanta, and plans to enter the insurance business in Chicago following his honeymoon. His bride is a member of a wealthy Richmond family.

Following his father's death Clark's mother married Ulric Atkinson, well known in fire insurance circles, who is now with the firm of March & McLennan, of Chicago. The marriage ceremony was performed by Dr. Charles King, formerly of Covington, Ga., now pastor of fashionable Grace Covenant Presbyterian church.

SAVANNAH PARTY TENDERED DINNER

Atlanta's entertainment of the 100 "get-acquainted" tourists from Savannah, who, accompanied by the Parris Island Marine band, invaded this city Tuesday, was concluded with a banquet Tuesday night at the chamber of commerce building. The Savannah party is touring the state this week in the interest of establishing the coast city as a state port, and already has visited five cities on the trip, coming here Tuesday morning from Gainesville.

Members of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, hosts to visitors, entertained the delegation during the day in a series of elaborate functions and a sight-seeing tour of the city which included a trip to Stone Mountain and other points of interest in Fulton county.

Among speakers at the banquet Tuesday night were G. L. Groover, vice president of the Citizens and Southern bank, of Savannah; Walter A. Sims, mayor of Atlanta; F. M. Oliver, past governor of the Savannah Kiwanis club and chairman of the Chatham board of commissioners; Paul E. Seabrook, mayor of Savannah; B. S. Barker, secretary of the Atlanta chamber of commerce; J. K. Orr, ex-president of the Atlanta chamber of commerce; Preston Arkwright, president of the Georgia Railway and Power company, and other distinguished Georgians.

Praises Atlanta.

Mr. Groover, who reviewed the trip thus far, depicted Atlanta as the "New York of the southeast," and declared that its future growth depended on the growth of Savannah. He favored the establishment of the state port in Savannah as a vital necessity for Georgia.

"This is not only a Savannah proposition," Mr. Groover declared, "it is Atlanta's proposition, and one that the people of the state must know, as every town and hamlet will be materially benefited on the opening of the port. But if educational appropriations should be decreased, if road maintenance would suffer on its account or if taxes would be increased by it, I would be the first to oppose it. Such is not the case. The port will be a blessing in every conceivable way."

Mr. Oliver, in an ardent speech in support of the project, said that the hearts of all Savannahans go out in love for "the great and optimistic city of Atlanta," and begged for the support of its citizens in the fight for the port.

"Atlanta must realize the necessity for a state port," he declared. "It will afford a great outlet for the state's products for European markets at a cheapened freight rate, and the income of the farmers and business houses of Georgia will be greatly increased."

He spoke at great length on the subject, and his address was answered with pledges from leading Atlantans for its support. The itinerary includes 78 cities in Georgia.

TOURISTS LEAVE ATLANTA FOR ROME.

Rome, Ga., June 17.—(Special.)—The 100 citizens of Savannah touring Georgia on a friendship mission will arrive in Rome from Atlanta Wednesday morning. They will then attend the meeting of the county commissioners of Georgia in annual convention at the court house.

After breakfast and an exchange of felicitations, the party will be carried to Berry school for an inspection of that institution, to important manufacturing plants in the city and to the municipal building, where they will be received by the county commissioners, convention. They will leave from Lindale for Cedartown.

New York, June 17.—The cotton market was unsettled today by a renewal of July liquidation. Delivery for that month sold off from 28.88 to 28.54, or 22 points net lower, and the near month weakness was reflected by a decline in new crop positions which carried October off to 25.75. Closing prices were about the lowest of the day, with market barely steady at net declines of 16 to 22 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of four points on July, but generally 6 to 14 points lower in response to disappointing cables. Covering of July shorts by brokers with Wall street connections sent the price 12 points net higher during the early trading and later deliveries worked up several points in response to reports of continued high temperatures in the southwest. Demand failed to broaden, however, while private reports as to the effect of the hot weather were conflicting and the market turned easier in the afternoon under realizing or liquidation promoted by the relatively easy ruling of July in the New Orleans market.

Exports today, 17,985, making 5,482,735 so far this season. Port receipts, 3,106. United States port stocks, 320,387.

TRADING DULL AT NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, June 17.—The cotton market was extremely dull and narrow today with fluctuations showing a spread of only 25 points in new crop positions. The general trend was downward but there was no selling pressure, traders bearishly inclined being held in check by the high temperatures in the western belt. July showed more weakness than the new crop months under a renewal of liquidation. After trading 5 points lower near the opening, July dropped eventually to 28.01, or 39 points below yesterday's close. October and December near the start traded 1 and 2 points above the previous close, but gradually eased off to 24.95 for the former and 24.72 for the latter, or 24 to 25 points down from the early high. The close was near the lowest showing net losses for the day of 38 points on July and 21 to 23 points on new crop months.

It was a weather market from start to finish. Prices were supported at the start by continued high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma, but the weather map was favorable and the forecast was for continued fair weather. The easier tone of the later trading was due to private reports of cooler weather in Oklahoma and indications of a lowering of temperatures in Texas. A report by a prominent firm that the crop has made excellent progress in the eastern half of the belt in the last ten days, helped the reaction.

The sustaining influences included rather liberal exports for the day and advices that more than 30 mills in the Carolinas were resuming full time. The board of directors of the New Orleans exchange today voted to close the exchange on July 4 and 5.

News, Views And Reviews

Stock Letters.

FENNER & BEANE.

New York, June 17.—The general theory is that market after its long upturn is due for a corrective reaction but so far each group has taken care of itself with slight daily setbacks which may dispense with any need for an all around technical adjustment.

LIVINGSTON & CO.

New York, June 18.—We believe leading issues are a purchase. The Wabash issues, for instance, have been hanging back because of the postponement of dividend declaration on the "A" longer than was expected. We believe, however, that this stock will go on a $4 or $5 annual basis in the next few months and we think that both it and the common stock are purchases on any small reaction. Southern Pacific, N. Y. Central, Illinois Central and Atchison should all sell higher.

Cotton Letters.

POST & FLAGG.

New York, June 17.—If the weekly weather is as favorable as expected tomorrow it may be taken as an indication to the probable showing of private condition reports for June which will begin to appear presently and in turn will serve to give some suggestion as to the probable showing of the official report due on July 2. It is generally conceded that some improvement has resulted from the climatic conditions of the past week or ten days' though confidence on that point would be greater if temperatures had not been quite so high in the southwest.

FENNER & BEANE.

New Orleans, June 17.—Believers in lower prices argue that this weather is just what is needed for the crop but the action of the market indicates they are more inclined to talk it down than to sell it down. Sentiment of the average trader favors the selling side and pressure is likely to be heavy if the weekly review should turn out to be favorable. We believe the market is still in an oversold condition.

ORVIS BROS. & CO.

New York, June 17.—At the moment there is no apparent incentive to bull cotton and the gradually easing prices result from moderate liquidation at these times when buyers are more disposed to await further crop reports and developments before determining if aggressive actions should be taken around this level. In the meantime sellers have the advantage. We believe the market will work lower. Liverpool due Wednesday: July, 16.61; October, 15.13.

A. V. CURRAN & CO.

New Orleans, La., June 17.—H. & B. Beer says: Reports of high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma doing damage, sustaining feature of the market. This may be true at some points in Texas where temperatures have been ranging at 100 and above for past week, but reports of crop-condition generally, from all over the belt, says plant is in idea shape and prospects are good. Austin, Texas, says average is late but crop coming fast with abundant moisture below and looks like normal crop July 15. West Texas says with one more rain, will make one and a half million bales, that hot weather has killed off first crop of weevil. Mississippi says June has been all that could be desired for growing cotton and crop has been thoroughly worked and that earlier plantings are looking fine. Carolinas report along the same line. However, heavy damage by weevil usually comes in July and August. Cotton mills in Augusta district reducing stocks of cotton by sales for shipment to continent and Russia, despite which accumulation of goods continues. Sentiment apparently more bullish than otherwise but very cautious.

HUBBARD BROS. & CO.

New York, June 17.—There seems to be a moderate demand for contracts under the market from the trade and this indicates that cotton at a slightly lower level of price is attractive. Temporarily we may have some setbacks on good weather but if temperatures continue abnormal as they have in some cases, we will find the market advancing again.

New York, June 17.—The forward movement in bond prices which had been in progress for the past week received its first check today when various issues accumulated on the recent upswing were unloaded. Prices gave way in all sections of the list, although some foreign obligations, including the Belgian issues, established new 1924 high records.

U. S. government bonds, which first showed signs of reaction yesterday, lost further ground today as evidence accumulated that the supply of surplus funds was growing smaller. Treasury operations were credited with reducing to some extent the volume of idle money, although not to a degree that would affect money rates. Additional purchase of Liberty bonds nevertheless were discouraged and the treasury 4 1-4s fell back to 104.20, almost a full point below the record high level attained last week.

The declaration of Premier Herriot of France that evacuation of the Ruhr must await fulfillment of the Dawes guarantees caused some selling of French governmental and municipal bonds, which moved lower with the france. Belgian issues, however, were strong and several South American obligations sold at the year's highest levels. Bankers were preparing to offer a $3,000,000 loan for the municipality of Medellin, Colombia, which will take the form of 25-year eight per cent dollar bonds. New Jersey's $11,000,000 bond offering, on which bids were opened today, commanded a substantial premium.

Price changes of domestic corporation liens mainly were unimportant. Omission of the Kelly-Springfield six per cent dividend influenced some liquidation of this company's eight per cent bonds and those of other rubber companies. Gas company issues were aided by a favorable court decision and Pierce-Arrow 8s jumped four points.

TREND IRREGULAR IN CURB MARKET

New York, June 17.—Profit-taking was responsible for irregular price movements in curb market trading today, affecting chiefly the oils and public utilities which have recently been making marked headway. In contrast to declines in other issues, American Light and Traction gained more than 3 points and Adirondack Power 1 1-8 points. Appalachian Power lost 3 1-2 points on small sales and Lehigh Power receded fractionally.

The majority of the Standard Oil issues held their ground, most of them recording fractional recessions, while Standard of Nebraska, South Pennsylvania Oil and Standard Oil of Ohio made gains of 1 to 4 points on small turn-overs. Prairie Oil and Gas and Standard of Indiana closed fractionally lower.

National Tea led the industrials with a gain of 10 points and strength also was shown by Centrifugal Cast Iron Pipe, which closed 2 points higher. Transactions of more than 22,000 shares carried Lehigh Valley Coal down more than a point.

Motor and radio shares were active but without important changes at the close.

New York, June 17.—Stock prices resumed their movement to higher ground at the opening of today's market but the advance was interrupted in the late dealings by heavy profit-taking and a renewal of bear selling, closing prices showing a curious mixture of gains and losses. Though substantial inroads were made into the quoted values of several oils, rubbers, motors and motor accessories, marked independent strength was shown by most of the tobaccos, public utilities and chain store issues.

Buying of public utilities received its impetus from a federal court decision holding the local $1 gas law unconstitutional and confiscatory. New 1924 high records were established during the session by Consolidated Gas, Brooklyn Union Gas, Columbia Gas and Electric, American Waterworks common and Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit common, the net gains ranging from fractions to three points.

High current earnings formed the basis for the bullish demonstration in chain issues, Kresge jumping 15 1-4 points to a new 1924 high at 380 1-4, while Woolworth new stock, which had advanced 22 points in the last eight days, added two more today by touching a record top of 104 3-4.

Omission of the dividend on Kelly Springfield six per cent preferred was used by bear traders as an excuse for an attack on rubber shares. Losses in the Kelly-Springfield issues ranged from moderate fractions on the common shares to 3 1-2 points for the six per cent preferred. Goodrich, Fiske, U. S. Rubber and Goodyear stocks suffered slight recessions.

Recent activity in the rail group subsided, but stocks of the Van Sweringen roads manifested conspicuous strength. Chesapeake & Ohio and "Nickel Plate" both established new high records for the year at 81 and 87, respectively, before dropping back to around yesterday's closing levels. Southern Pacific shares were under accumulation, but delay in negotiating the lease of the Norfolk & Western to the Pennsylvania railroad caused a recession of 1 3-4 points in the former.

Selling pressure was renewed against the oil shares in the final dealings. Cosden, singled out for attack, yielded more than a point and fractional declines took place in Marland, Phillips, Sinclair and Pan-American issues.

Foreign exchanges developed reactionary trend. French francs were driven down about 18 points on selling inspired by Premier Herriot's declaration that evacuation of the Ruhr would be deferred until the guarantees provided in the Dawes plan had been set up. Adoption of this policy, it was felt, might possibly delay the early settlement of European difficulties that bankers had been looking for. At the close of the market, francs were selling around 5.35 cents and sterling was fractionally lower, hovering around $4.32.

A quiet undertone prevailed in the money market. Call funds ruled at 2 per cent all day and rates on time loans ranged from three per cent for short maturities to 3 3-4 per cent for six months' obligations. Commercial paper was active with most of the business transacted at four per cent, although some of the best names discounted at 3 3-4.

LATE RALLY SEEN IN WHEAT MARKET

Chicago, June 17.—Wheat suddenly advanced today at the last, after having averaged lower from the outset. Renewal of speculative demand was in evidence, together with reports that the hot wave of the southwest was spreading. Closing prices for wheat were strong, 3-4 to 1 3-8c net higher, July, $1.15 1-2 to $1.15 3-4, and September, $1.16 7-8 to $1.17. Corn finished unchanged to 1c higher; oats, unchanged to 1-8c off, and provisions varying from 5c decline to an equal gain.

High price records for the season were again broken on the late advance in the wheat market, July and September both attaining new top figures. All of the day's advance was scored during the fifteen minutes just preceding the close, an upturn of 2c quickly taking place. Earlier, the market was depressed by general selling to realize profits and as a a result of opinions that something of a reaction was to be expected in view of the recent continued rise in prices. Weakness of the Liverpool market today was also a temporary bearish factor. Winnipeg, however, showed strength, and this circumstance had considerable to do with encouragement of fresh speculative buying here.

Word that export business amounting to 500,000 bushels was under way at the Atlantic seaboard and that some sales to Europe for shipment via the gulf of Mexico had likewise been made was helpful, too, in rallying the wheat market today. Besides, there was gossip that Argentina had 10,000,000 bushels less of a surplus than current estimates called for.

Smallness of supplies strengthened the corn market despite better weather. Old crop months made new high records. Oats were easy as a result of selling on the part of principal holders.

Firmness of hog values steadied the provision market.

Grain Letter.

FENNER & BEANE.

Chicago, Ill., June 17.—WHEAT: All the break was in the first few minutes and was due to sentiment as much as anything else, as trade largely believed the market was due for setback; on breaks there was new buying through commission houses and local reinstated lines previosly sold out. Cash basis steady.

CORN: An early break met with influential buying and prices for July and September recovered to around the previous close. Fine weather and an extended long interest prevented December from responding fully. Cash basis shade better.

OATS: Stop loss selling caused sharp break early. Later market was dull with a firm undertone at a recovery from the low point. Cash basis steady to shade easier.

PROVISIONS: Hogs 5c to 10c higher; top, $7.45.

WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC AND MANUFACTURING CO.: Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, according to Mr. E. M. Herr, is finding its volume of business somewhat less than for the corresponding period a year ago, although the decrease has not been of sufficient volume to materially affect operations, Mr. Herr says: "The condition of business in our industry is quite satisfactory especially considering the tendency of business in general to slow up at the present time."

CAST IRON PIPE: U. S. Cast Iron Pipe once more broke into new high territory during today's market session. Since there are only 125,000 shares of this stock outstanding most of which is tightly held by different interests, floating supply for market purposes is very small. The natural result is that this stock from now on will be, in the nature of things, subject to erratic market fluctuations.

I. C. C. Will Push New System For Unifying Rail Facilities

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, June 17.—Frank McManamay, a member of the interstate commerce commission, speaking before railway officials at the Atlantic City convention of the American Railway association, made it plain that the commission is going ahead under the transportation act of 1921 to consolidate all of the railroads of the country into a limited number of systems for the purpose of unifying railway facilities, stabilizing railway credit by proper rate making, for control of revenue and for better control of the issuance of new railway securities.

Mr. McManamay points out that under the transportation act, there can be no railway mergers or no construction of new roads or extensions without first obtaining the approval of the commission and that power is given the commission to require general use of terminal facilities so that the public needs may be met; that federal control of the railroads during the world war had demonstrated the need for unified use of equipment and facilities and of uniform standards of service and operation.

Mr. McManamay and his associates will find many railway officials ready to go to the mat with them before the public on that question. However, there is no question in the mind of those who are well informed in railway developments that the trend is all in the direction of carrying out the plans of the commission provided for in the transportation act of 1920 for consolidating all of the railroads of the country into a limited number of systems.

New highs for this movement were made early today by General Electric, American Can, Refining and other leaders, after which there was some profit-taking. On the declines, however, trading grew very quiet. We have now had nine days of advancing prices and the market probably would be in a healthier condition for a temporary set-back, but no set-back of any importance is expected. The low for the year was made a month or more ago for industrial stocks and since then there has been a recovery of five points. This, to close observers, is convincing evidence that the bear market is over and that the price trend is now upward.

One sign of the times is that brokers are now starting out each day with a list carried over from the day before of stocks to be purchased. Each day higher prices are named by those after stocks. Only a very short time ago such orders which have a fixed buying price would have been executed each day on soft spots.

International Harvester company has laid off 1,500 additional men in its tractor department, daily production now running 40 against 50 to 60 only recently.

As an indication of general business conditions the Federal Rerserve bank at Richmond now has $45,000,000 rediscounts against its high of $145,000,000; Atlanta $39,000,000 against $177,000,000; Cleveland $47,000,000 against $167,000,000; St. Louis $23,000,000 against $159,000,000; Minneapolis $15,000,000 against $110,000,000; Dallas $15,000,000 against $113,000,000; Kansas City $25,000,000 against $161,000,000; Philadelphia $30,000,000 against $251,000,000; New York $35,000,000 against $989,000,000.

Directors of Kelly Springfield Tire met today and passed the one per cent quartely dividend on the six per cent preferred stock. The dividend is cumulative.

Some Wall street brokers are advising their clients to buy shares of electrical manufacturing companies on the theory that there is ahead a period of at least ten years of large world demand. In this connection it is being pointed out that holders of electrical manufacturing company shares have made large profits during the past decade through higher prices and through cash and stock dividends.

AUTO LAW VIOLATORS GIVEN HEAVY FINES

Forsyth, Ga., June 17.—(Special.) Automobile owners who had not yet applied for 1924 license tags paid more than $200 during the first week following the appointment of T. S. Holland and C. T. Kimball as county policemen in Monroe county. In addition to collecting a large amount from delinquent auto owners, the officers confiscated a still, destroyed several gallons of beer and whisky and arrested the alleged operators, Seab Wilson, white, and Marshall Jones, negro.

Are You Skating on Thin Ice?

"I bequeath to my heirs"—a fine-sounding phrase. But in these days of almost confiscatory inheritance taxes—what does it mean?

A certain man, for instance, lately inherited $1,896,000. At the same time, however, he inherited under his father's will, a liability to pay taxes amounting to $3,246,000!

The property-owner who merely makes a will, and lets it go at that, skates on thin ice. —Needlessly.

Without obligation—and in strict confidence—one of the principals of this organization will be glad to advise you approximately the extent to which your estate would be taxed, and how you could provide the ready cash to meet those taxes.

Simply write your name and address in the space above, tear out this advertisement, and place it in the mail. An appointment will be arranged, at your own convenience.

Daughter Would Succeed Dead Father as Treasurer

MISS MARGARET CULBERSON

Miss Margaret Culberson, oldest daughter of Hubert L. Culberson, who died last Wednesday, will be a candidate to succeed her father as treasurer of Fulton county at the general election this fall, it was announced Tuesday by friends of Miss Culberson and her late father.

Mr. Culberson who died "in harness" had served as county treasurer for 17 years and was one of the oldest, most faithful and best beloved of Fulton county's officials.

Miss Culberson is 28 years old and is the first woman ever to offer for a Fulton county office. If elected she will be the first woman ever to hold the office of county treasurer in this county.

Miss Culberson is considered by her many friends as being particularly fitted for the office. She is a native Atlantan and graduated from Girls' High school, later attending two well known eastern colleges. She later was a member of the faculty at Agnes Scott college, retiring last fall following a serious automobile accident to her mother.

She is a granddaughter of the late Judge Logan E. Bleckley, chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia for many years; a niece of Logan Bleckley, clerk of the court of appeals of Georgia, and a great-niece of the late General John B. Gordon.

The many friends of her father in the political, social and fraternal world are actively organizing to support Miss Culberson in the coming election.

GEORGIA SCHOOLS WIN HIGH R. O. T. C. HONORS

Georgia Tech, Citadel, University of Georgia, Virginia Military institute, Alabama Polytechnic institute, Clemson, Louisiana State and Texas A. and M. have been awarded the distinguished college honor by the war department because of the ratings of their reserve officers' training corps, it has been announced.

The award is given a maximum of 20 per cent of colleges throughout the United States having R. O. T. C. units, and is based on efficiency and merit of the military units. The information on which awards are based is secured by a corps of United States army experts, who visit the various institutions during the year, and conduct rigid examinations.

The southern schools selected this year are the same as in 1923, with the exception of University of Georgia and Louisiana State, which won the places held last year by Mississippi A. and M. and Florida.

MAUGHAN TO TRY COAST-TO-COAST FLIGHT THURSDAY

Mineola, N. Y., June 17.—Lieutenant Russell L. Maughan's attempt to cross the continent between dawn and dusk will be made Thursday if atmospheric conditions are favorable, according to the latest announcement made today.

By starting at 2:22 a. m. eastern standard time, and flying at the rate of 160 miles an hour, Maughan hopes to reach the Pacific by dusk, or in approximately seventeen hours. He attempted to make the same flight twice before, but was forced down each time without completing the trip. He will make four stops en route for gasoline.

Reverent Homage Paid to Heroes By Pacific Fleet

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Trona Field, San Pedro, Cal., June 17.—The Pacific fleet today paid tremendous and reverent homage to the three officers and 45 men who fell in line of duty Thursday in No. 2 turret of the battleship Mississippi.

"You died at your posts of duty," said Rear Admiral W. V. Pratt as he faced the long rows of coffins in the last ceremonies for the dead.

In hollow square their comrades of the fleet stood at attention in the final salute. Thousands of civilians about this field, which has witnessed the athletic prowess of some of those who lay still, rose bare-headed. The marine guard of honor pointed their rifles skyward, three farewell volleys flashed and Bugler "Pop" Dallaghan, the oldest trumpter in the navy, sounded the solemn stirring notes of "The Last Post."

Early in the morning 47 caskets were borne to the field and arranged in the form of a cross. The forty-eighth, that containing the body of Lieutenant Thomas E. Zellars, yesterday started its long journey to a Georgia grave.

Over each coffin lay the flag and banked about them were thousands of flowers. Every ship in the Pacific fleet had its mourners in the living square about the still centerpiece—4,000 of them, officers and men. As the band marched on to the field, an airplane dropped flowers.

Vice Admiral Henry A. Wiley said: "We come here in sorrow to mourn the loss of our comrades and join in the last services over them. The accident found them at their posts, putting forth the best that was in them. Their last moments gave the most positive proofs of their courage and devotion. They died in line of duty."

Rear Admiral Pratt declared that the men who perished gave their lives heroically to their country. The accident, he said, disclosed no faint hearts among the men of the Mississippi.

"The eagle will sit secure by his nest so long as such men and such ships guard our shores," he declared.

NEW YORK EVENING POST

COMMUNISTS GET THIRD PARTY SEAT

Convention Hall, St. Paul, Minn., June 17.—Communist delegates, so bitterly opposed by Senator Robert M. La Follette, squeezed without opposition into the picturesque farmer-labor "third party convention" which got under way in a big downtown theater here Tuesday.

Organizers of the convention who have views of forming a national farmer-labor party to fight the old-line major parties in the coming presidential campaign withdrew their objections to seating the communists at the last moment and the way was cleared for their participation in the convention on an equal footing with the other delegations.

The first session, attended by some 300 delegates from about 25 states, was given over largely to organization of the convention on a permanent basis.

La Follette Blast Hurt.

A large number of delegates failed to appear and leaders admitted that it was because of the stand taken by La Follette against the convention. A thousand had been expected. Nevertheless, those who are here are prepared to indorse and perhaps nominate La Follette if the communists will let them.

William Mahoney, temporary chairman, a kindly gray-haired man who has been editing a labor paper here and has been unsuccessful socialist candidate for mayor and secretary of the successful farmer-labor party of this state, sounded the keynote speech, criticizing La Follette for his stand against the convention but indorsing his candidacy as that of the only logical man to lead the dissatisfied voters of the nation to a successful attack upon the old-line parties.

Denies Rule of Lenin.

"The workers and the farmers of this nation must be represented by a national third party," Mahoney told the delegates amidst applause. "We are here to start the movement."

"They say the dead hand of Lenin rules this convention," Mahoney said. "I don't believe it does. I think the farmers and laborers of this country rule this convention.

"I don't want to see you spoil any chance for getting the greatest number of progressive votes by giving anyone a chance to criticize this convention."

Farmers and Radicals.

The delegates comprised farmers just come to town from the fields, about 30 women—young ones with bobbed hair and knickerbockers, fat ones and old—flashily-dressed young garment workers' officials from New York; collarless red-faced labor organizers from the west and every conceivable type of the various so-called radical groups of the nation.

The convention will get down to real business Wednesday when the actual work of drawing a platform and selecting the method of indorsing La Follette will come to the floor.

Communists are holding their fireworks until then. They propose to get into any third-party organization on an equal footing with everyone else if they possibly can.

Taylor Named Chairman.

The first part of the organization program went off swiftly and with precision. But in the afternoon the delegates got into a squabble about how the permanent chairman should be chosen so that—as Delegate Taylor, Nebraska, who does not wear a necktie, explained—"we will not look like a steam roller to the capitalistic press which fills the platform."

The communists voted for Taylor.

EDUCATION BOARD TO FIGHT ABOLITION

The board of education Tuesday voted to make a determined fight for existence against the onslaught launched in city council Monday which resulted in approval of a charter amendment which will put the question of abolition of the board to a vote of the people in September.

The special charter revision committee of the board, which prepared the independent school board plan which council voted against Monday, was instructed to decide on a course of action for the board. A special meeting is to be called probably next week to adopt definite plans for the fight.

A. C. Meixell, commissioner from the ninth ward, said that he would urge a city-county merger as an alternative for restoring the city schools to control of council under a school commission elected by council.

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, commissioner from the eleventh ward and member of the special committee, stated that she would propose carrying the school board's plan direct to the people, regardless of council's adverse vote Monday.

Calls for Independence.

The board's plan calls for complete independence for the present school board, an increase of two mills in tax rates, or 20 cents on the $100 property valuation, and an increase from 26 per cent to 32 per cent in the proportion of city revenues set aside for schools.

The special committee which is to consider the board's line of action is composed of D. M. Therrell, W. W. Gaines, Dr. R. M. Eubanks, Mrs. Z. V. Peterson and W. C. Slate.

FOUR CANDIDATES PAY ENTRANCE FEES FOR FALL ELECTION

Four candidates for re-election to state offices paid entry fees Tuesday to Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the democratic state executive committee.

The four in question, two of whom are already facing opposition, their opponents having qualified earlier, are J. J. Brown, to succeed himself as commissioner of agriculture, and opposed by George F. Hunnicutt; Dr. N. H. Ballard, to succeed himself as state superintendent of education, opposed by Fort Land, and Justices Samuel C. Atkinson and S. P. Gilbert, to succeed themselves on the state supreme court bench.

250 METHODISTS ATTEND ANNUAL DISTRICT MEETING

A new attendance record was set Tuesday at the opening of the annual conference of the south Atlantic district of the North Georgia Methodist church when approximately 250 members and laymen from churches in the district attended the session, which will continue today.

Bishop U. V. Darlington, of Huntington, West Virginia, will speak this morning at 11:30 o'clock.

An interesting feature of the ceremonies will be breaking of ground for the new parsonage of the Calvary Methodist church, at 400 Lucile avenue, Wednesday, at 1 o'clock.

New species of insects are being found and classified at the rate of 6,000 a year.

To the Voters Of Fulton County

I wish to announce my candidacy for one of the three places as Representative of Fulton County in the General Assembly, subject to the Democratic White Primary of next September.

If elected, it is my intention to serve the interests of the people of Fulton County and of the State to the best of my ability and I shall try to serve all classes and interests fairly and impartially. All measures looking toward the industrial or educational development of our State will receive my earnest consideration.

In my opinion our Legislature is seriously hampered by the large number of bills under consideration at each session, such volume of bills preventing proper conideration of the most important measures. For this reason, as well as for economic reasons, I heartily advocate and if elected will support the proposed amendment to the Constitution of our State, substituting biennial for annual sessions of the Legislature.

The people of this County have overwhelmingly expressed themselves as being opposed to the fee system for county officers, and I should feel it my duty, in this as in all other matters, to give effect to their expressed wishes, by advocating the salary system for such officers.

I am in favor of preserving our present gasoline tax for the betterment of our roads. I favor strict economy in all departments and the saving of every cent of our taxes from waste. Georgia's finances are in no condition to justify the waste of a dollar. I believe our schools should be kept up to as high a state of efficiency as possible.

I shall appreciate the vote and support of the citizens of Fulton County.

Respectfully yours,
FRANK A. HOOPER, JR.

Beautiful Home Ceremony Marks Malone-Jones Wedding

A social event of rare beauty, which drew the affectionate interest of thousands throughout the United States, was the marriage of Miss Mary Malone and Robert Tyre Jones Tuesday evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John N. Malone, on Springdale road in Druid Hills.

Exquisite Decorations.

The beautiful home was artistic in its adornment with palms and other verdant foliage forming a background for the pedestal baskets of summer flowers which gave a delightful touch of color to the setting.

The ceremony was performed by Father James Horton, of Sacred Heart church, in the living room of the home before an altar of palms, interspersed with wicker baskets of Madonna lilies and cathedral candelabra, holding lighted tapers. Over the alter, created in the form of a four-leaf clover, was a canopy of smilax and Madonna lilies, profusely showered with valley lilies and scintillating with the glow from scores of tiny electric lights which added to its brilliance.

The aisle to the altar was formed of standards garlanded with white satin ribbon and smilax, and the side walls of the room were banked with dense masses of greenery.

Bridal Party.

Mrs. Rankin Manley was the first bridesmaid to enter. She was followed by Mrs. Elwyn Tomlinson, Miss Marion Smith and Miss Katherine Haverty, entering singly and portraying a beautiful picture in their exquisite costumes.

The gowns, fashioned alike, were created of apple-green chiffon, which veiled tea-rose chiffon to form the predominant shade in their design. The full skirts were adorned with five cascades of rich cream cob-web lace, caught with tiny clusters of French rosebuds, while at the waist a narrow band of orchid taffeta ribbon was tied, the streamers from the bow falling to the hem of the skirt. The tight-fitting waists were simple in design, relieved only by the collars of cream cob-web lace which fell in one large point in the front, and producing a bertha effect in the back. Completing the dainty costumes were shower bouquets of pink and lavender sweet peas, snapdragons and pink rosebuds.

Miss Freeman's costume was a Laura Mays model of flesh chiffon puffs, joined with exquisite bands of real lace. The waist was finished with a quaint sixteenth century neckline and puffed chiffon sleeves. The frock was worn over a slip of flesh-colored silk and was trimmed with dainty hand-made rosettes of lace and French rosebuds.

Radiantly Beautiful Bride.

The beautiful bride was given in marriage by her father, John N. Malone, with whom she entered. Her dark hair and eyes and her exquisitely fair coloring, outstanding features of her exceptional and stately beauty, were intensified by her wedding gown of shimmering white satin and rose point lace. The close-fitting bodice, fashioned without sleeves, was finished at the neckline with a deep yoke of soft rose point lace and was embroidered in a rose design of pearls, from which radiated sprays of silken embroidery which formed a delicate background for the exquisite handmade satin rosebuds which adorned the entire bodice. The full satin skirt fell in large scallops over a deep flounce of rose point lace. The scallops were outlined in the same silken design of the bodice and in the center of each was a rose of pearls continuing the prevailing motif. The silken sprays of embroidery which emanated from each of the roses of pearls on the skirt reached almost to the waistline of the beautiful gown and were again fitting backgrounds for the gorgeous profusion of satin rosebuds.

Soft tulle, which formed the upper part of the satin train and revealed the back of the beautiful gown, was attached mid-way by sprays of orange blossoms. Folding over this in graceful folds was the magnificent real lace veil, which was caught to the bride's soft hair with a coronet of rose point lace, adorned at either side with clusters of orange blossoms. Across the back the fullness of the veil was caught by a spray of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Brilliant Reception.

A brilliant reception followed the ceremony. The bride's table was overlaid with a handsome lace cloth and adorned in the center with a beautiful three-tier bride's cake, topped with a cluster of orchids. Rosebuds and valley lilies were embossed on the cake, which had at its base a mound of pink rosebuds and pastel-shaded sweet peas. Silver candlesticks held unshaded pink tapers tied with tulle bows adorned with showers of orange blossoms.

Mr. and Mrs. Malone were assisted in entertaining by Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Jones, parents of the groom, and members of the families.

Mrs. Malone was handsome in a beautiful gown of white crepe embroidered in crystals and rhinestones. Her corsage bouquet was of orchids and valley lilies.

Mr. Jones and his bride left later in the evening for a wedding journey to Asheville, N. C., and after their return will be at home with Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Jones on Lullwater road.

Mrs. Jones wore a smart model of dark blue georgette trimmed with crystal buttons and her hat of black felt was close-fitting and adorned with patent leather trimmings.

Families of Prominence.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John N. Malone and is the sister of John, Jr., and Matthew Malone. She is a descendant of prominent South Carolina and Georgia families and comes from a line of women noted for their beauty and charm. Her mother was formerly Miss Mamie Rice, of Augusta, daughter of the late Captain and Mrs. Matthew Rice. Her maternal and paternal grandfathers were distinguished Confederate soldiers.

Mrs. Jones is one of the most beautiful young girls in Atlanta society, of the brunette type, with dark hair and lovely brown eyes, whose gracious manner and sweet personality have made her an admired belle, not only here, but wherever she has visited. She graduated from Washington seminary, where she was a member of the Pi Pi sorority and Bull Dog club. She made a formal debut in 1921-22, and since that time has been one of the most popular and admired young women in society. She is a member of the junior league.

Mr. Jones is also a descendant of prominent families. His paternal grandfather is Robert F. Jones, of Canton, Ga., a leading merchant, manufacturer and banker of north Georgia. His paternal grandmother was the former Miss Susie Walker, of Covington. His maternal grandfather was the late Judge William Bailey Thomas, for years a resident of Atlanta. His family was the old Thomas family of Georgia, for whom the town of Thomaston was named. His grandmother was the former Miss Mary Hanson, of Barnesville, sister of the late I. N. Hanson, prominent Georgian, and of Major J. F. Hanson, who was at the time of his death president of the Central of Georgia railway.

He graduated from Tech High, Georgia Tech and Harvard university, from which latter institution he obtained an A. B. degree. At Harvard he was a member of the Owl club, the S. A. E. fraternity and distinguished himself in athletics, particularly golf.

He is a member of the East Lake, Druid Hills and Capital City clubs and an honorary member of the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs. He is associated in business with the Adair Realty company.

Mr. Jones, known all over the golfing world as Bobby Jones, until recently was the national open champion of the United States, in addition to which title—regarded as the "blue ribbon" of golf in America—he has won the southern amateur championship three times. His record includes the position of runner-up in the national amateur championship in 1919, and that of semi-finalist twice. In the open championship he has finished eighth once, fifth once, second once and first in the tournament last year. He played on the first Walker cup team, which won the great international competition with Great Britain at Southampton, Long Island, in 1922, and besides his various championships he has won a vast number of special competitions, club tournaments, invitation tournaments, and such events. He is regarded throughout the world as the "glass of fashion and the mold of form" in golf, and not a few writers and critics assert that he is the greatest stroke-player who ever lived.

Miss Mary Hill Bloodworth Weds Mr. Woodruff at Trinity Church

The marriage of Miss Mary Hill Bloodworth and Bruce Franklin Woodruff was a social event of beauty and prominence Tuesday evening at the Trinity Methodist church.

The ceremony, which took place at 6 o'clock, was performed by Dr. S. R. Belk, pastor of the church, in the presence of the families and close friends of the bride and groom.

Church Decorations.

The handsome church was lavishly decorated with a beautiful display of stately palms, foliage, plants and summer flowers. The altar was banked with a mass of rich green palms garlanded with smilax and reaching to the organ loft. In the center were giant seven-branched cathedral candelabra holding white burning tapers, while at either side were graceful pedestal baskets of Madonna lilies.

Outlining the side walls were palms and pedestals holding urns of beautiful summer flowers.

Miss Mary Sadler, as maid of honor and the bride's only attendant, was beautifully costumed in a model of rose Dore tulle over pink satin. The gown was created with a bouffant skirt, bordered with exquisite lace and adorned with a band of pastel-shaded chiffon flowers which, when caught to her wrist, gave the full skirt a dainty fan-like effect. Across the waist, in fichu effect, tulle was draped, while at the left, on the waist line, was an ornament of chiffon flowers in the pastel shades. She carried a shower bouquet of lavender and pink sweet peas, studded with cornflowers.

Hollins Randolph was Mr. Woodruff's best man and the ushers included William Sibley, Spencer Tunnell, Natz Weller and Kendrick Scott.

Beautiful Bride.

The delicate blonde beauty of the bride was emphasized by her gown of white chiffon which veiled white satin. The full skirt was caught at the waist line with chiffon roses, with pale green leaves and centered with pearls. The waist was finished with a bertha of duchess lace which was draped to the back to form the upper part of the train of white satin, which was bordered with white chiffon and lined with pale green chiffon.

Her tulle veil, which was held in place by a Juliet cap of tiny seed pearls, caught at the right side with a spray of orange blossoms, fell to the end of the train in point effect. Her shower bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. M. H. Bloodworth, whose gown was of poudre blue chiffon over satin. The wide blue lace border of the skirt was fashioned to drape up the left side of the gown to a large orchid-colored rose. The chiffon waist, made with short sleeves, veiled a band of lace and was completed by a soft cape effect which fell from her shoulders. She wore a scarf of orchid tulle and her corsage bouquet was of orchid sweet peas and valley lilies. The gowns of the bride, the bride's mother and the maid of honor were Martin Amorous models.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff left for an extended wedding journey to Canada and other northern points. They will return early in July and will be at home at 1119 Peachtree street.

Bride's Traveling Costume.

Mrs. Woodruff's traveling costume was a smart three-piece model of green crepe, the coat adorned with a collar of summer ermine. A close-fitting tan hat completed the costume.

Possessed of a piquant and charming blonde beauty, the bride, the daughter of Mrs. Herbert Raines Bloodworth and the late Mr. Bloodworth, is among the most favored and beautiful of Atlanta's girls and has been popular in the social gaieties of the younger set since the completion of her education at Washington seminary, where she was a member of the Phi Pi sorority.

After attending the Girls' High school in Atlanta the bride was graduated from the Carnegie library school.

Popular in the social festivities at Georgia Tech, she has been honored many times as sponsor of various organizations and for various occasions in the athletic life of that institution. A member of the Atlanta Junior league, she has been intensely interested and active in its affairs since her affiliation with the organization.

The bride's mother, Mrs. H. R. Bloodworth, was a favorite belle of her day, Mary Hardwick, the daughter of Mrs. M. L. Hardwick and the late Mr. Hardwick.

Prominent Families.

On the maternal side the bride is related to the Wards and the Taliaferros, families whose activities in Georgia and southern social and historic life extend back to the pioneer days of the state and are richly significant in accomplishment.

The late Mr. Bloodworth, father of the bride, was at the time of his death cashier of the Atlanta National bank and was one of the city's most prominent leaders in business and civic affairs.

Judge O. H. B. Bloodworth, one of the most noted figures of the Georgia bench and bar, is a great-uncle of the bride. Mrs. Howard Smith, of Atlanta, is her older sister.

He attended school at Washington and Lee, in Virginia, where he was a member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity.

During the war he served at Pensacola and Key West as a member of the naval aviation corps of the United States navy. Following his discharge he returned to Washington and Lee, where he graduated in law. He is now with the firm of Randolph & Parker, in Atlanta.

Mr. Woodruff's mother was a Miss Bruce, of Arkansas, and on both his maternal and paternal side the groom comes from a long line of distinguished southern lawyers.

Mr. Woodruff is a member of the Piedmont Driving club and the Druid Hills Golf club.

Brilliant Wedding Unites Miss Cohen and Mr. Tillman

Marietta, Ga., June 17.—(Special.) Characterized by a rare degree of beauty and elegance and centering the social interest of the state, was the marriage of Miss Augusta Cohen, beautiful young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adrian Seixas Cohen, of Marietta, to Charles Edward Tillman, formerly of Quitman, Ga. The social prominence of the families, the personnel of the bridal party and the brilliant series of prenuptial parties tendered the lovely bride added a very cordial and sincere interest in the event.

The wedding was celebrated in the First Presbyterian church, which was elaborately decorated in palms, ferns and white hydrangeas. The pulpit was banked with ferns, intertwined with southern smilax.

While the wedding guests were assembling, Mrs. Harry Wormelsdorf, of Cartersville, rendered a beautiful musical program, accompanied by Paul Lovejoy on the violin. "Evening Star" from Tannhauser, "Barcarolle" from Hoffman, "Orange Blossoms" and "Because" from Jocelyn were among the selections. Preceding the ceremony Miss Sarah Patton sang "At Dawning," and just before the benediction she sang a single verse of "Perfect Love."

The ushers were: Henry S. Cohen, of Marietta; Edward W. Groves, of Marietta; W. V. Crowley and Ben C. Whitner, of Atlanta. The bridesmaids were Misses Eliza and Clara Tillman, of Quitman, sisters of the groom; Mrs. Karl Hester, Miss Louie Dean Stephens and Mrs. Edward W. Groves. Their gowns were fashioned alike of gold crepe chiffon over rose chiffon. They were made with the quaint bodices with bateau neck line. The bouffant skirts were trimmed with seven rows of puffs, alternating of gold and rose. A distinguished feature of the pretty gowns were the large shaded ribbon bows that finished them at the waist line on the left side. The bridesmaids carried arm bouquets of Ophelia roses, carrying out the shaded effect of rose and gold and tied with gold tulle.

Matron of Honor.

The matron of honor, Mrs. Willis Justus Milner, Jr., of Atlanta, sister of the bride, wore a gown of rose chiffon over peach chiffon, with bands of gold lace inset in the skirt and on the bodice the lace was arranged to form a most becoming V-shaped neck. The bodice was slightly lifted at the low waist line with a soft girdle.

The maid of honor, Miss Emmie Montgomery, wore a gown of gold chiffon, with bands of deep cream lace, fashioned with a tight bodice and bouffant skirt, with over-draperies of chiffon edged with the lace. Attached to the left shoulder was a flat bow of velvet ribbon, matching the lovely gown, with many ends, falling gracefully to the waist line. Her lovely bouquet was the counterpart of the one carried by the matron of honor, and was composed of Ophelia roses and gold snapdragon.

The dainty little flower girls were Matilda Tillman, youngest sister of the groom, and Emily Groves, a cousin of the bride. Their dresses were of gold georgette showered with gold ribbon and trimmed in French flowers. They carried golden baskets filled with sweetpeas shading from palest pink to rose.

Miss Margaret Cohen, niece of the bride, and Miss Marie Massey Brumby carried the ribbons. They wore gold georgette, with many soft ruffles of gold ribbons and French flowers completing the dainty little dresses.

Little Virginia Milner, niece of the bride, was ring bearer, and wore gold tissue embroidered in pastel shades, with French flowers. She carried the wedding ring in the heart of an Ophelia rose, tied with gold gauze embroidered in French flowers.

The Bride.

The beautiful bride was given in marriage by her father, Adrian Seixas Cohen. Her rich brunette beauty was enhanced by a gown of white moleskin crepe embroidered in seed pearls, with a broad girdle of pearls and crystals across the front. The back was made along straight lines. Her graceful court-train was fashioned with tulle to the waist; from there it fell in soft folds of Duchess satin. The veil of the same lovely tulle was edged with rare old lace and caught at intervals with orange blossoms. This lace was worn by the bride's paternal grandmother on her wedding veil in the year 1847. The veil, which was caught to the hair by a coronet of lace, fell to the end of the train.

The bride's only ornament was a platinum bracelet set with sapphires and diamonds, the gift of the groom. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

The sweetly impressive ceremony was performed by Dr. John H. Patton, the Episcopal service being used. As a recessional, Mendelssohn's wedding march was played as the bridal party left the church.

After the ceremony a brilliant reception was held at the bride's home on Cherokee street. The Cohen home was exquisitely decorated in quantities of lovely June blossoms. The bridal party received the congratulations of their many friends in the cozy living room, which was bright and fragrant with flowers in varying shades of pink.

The bride's table was covered with cluny lace and centered by the bride's cake, which was three tier in effect and embossed with small pink June roses and topped by a frosted basket filled with natural valley lilies and sweetheart roses.

The punch bowl was presided over by Miss Eugenie Tillman, Miss Amanda Groves and Miss Theo Smith. The bride's book was kept by Mrs. James D. Mull, of Atlanta.

The gifts displayed were unusually numerous, the bride's parents presenting a silver tea service and the groom's parents a chest of flat silver. Other gifts in silver, crystal and china were displayed.

Miss Cohen is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Cohen and a sister of J. G. Cohen, of Washington, D. C.; Henry S. Cohen, of Marietta and Mrs. Willis Milner, Jr., of Atlanta. Since her debut she has been one of the most admired girls in Marietta and Atlanta society. She is a young woman of superior mental attainments, combined with a loveliness of charm and disposition. On her maternal side her ancestry goes back to the Groves, of Pennsylvania, and Lord Randolph Brant, of England. Her maternal grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Groves, of Marietta.

On her paternal side she is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Cohen, of Savannah, and Atlanta; descended from General Bush, of Revolutionary fame.

Mr. Tillman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Tillman, of Quitman, one of south Georgia's most progressive men. He is treasurer of the South Georgia Railway company; vice president of the First National bank of Quitman and past president of the Rotary club.

SLAMS AND SALAAMS

By Louise Dooly

TEN years ago, in a profound salaam, we paid tribute to the girl of today.

Shut your ears to her detractors, we urged, and if you would know a modesty, an innocence, like that of the days of our grandmothers, go to the girls themselves and learn.

It was a convent school commencement that so reinspired our faith in the purity of girlhood.

Since that time, men's colleges in many localities have had commencement with its gaities, and the summer dances of the younger set have begun.

After the revelations in the costumes and the conduct of the belles of these balls (the conduct naturally matches the costumes, both of which reflect a state of mind) we are constrained to wonder:

Are all modest girls in convents?

If there are any outside, what makes their mothers think that their daughters can escape the taint of contact on the same ball room floor, with girls who show a defiance of convention that the bathing beauty in the movies, paid for her sacrifice of the glory of womanhood, hardly dares risk now, since decent public opinion has had the courage to assert itself, and has secured marked modification of the once prevalent appeal in the movies to the taste of the salacious-minded?

And is the anxiety all a sham which we hear mothers of sons express for the high morality of their boys and their boys' development of ideals of the essential purity of girlhood?

Where They Belong.

IT used to be a well founded boast in the south that southern cities had no "dance hall" type of girls.

Commercial growth of the cities, with increasing population, has apparently brought its attendant evils, and perhaps we might have expected the dance hall type.

But the surprise is, to see that type and the "nice" girl on the same dancing floor.

"Dance hall girls. Why they are not," somebody will exclaim, who hears the term applied when there is some flagrant display on the dance floor of the "charms" and the boldness of some particular girl. "They are nice people. I know that girl's mother."

Well, decent is a strong word, too.

But can a girl who is decent bring herself to appear on a ball room floor in an indecent costume, or an indecent lack of costume?

Can nice girls suffer such contact, and come out unscathed? Will they not be touched at least by the sensational scandal-mongering which invariably follows such an occasion, and is not discriminating in its placing of the blame?

And can a college boy (could even a mature man) harbor thoughts of the purity of girlhood in such an atmosphere?

In the Name of Pleasure.

THESE dances are the diversion of the young people in the summer time. All the young people go. Dancing is a wholesome amusement and I hate to keep my daughter, my son, away from all pleasure. The boys and girls are young only once.

Haven't you heard mothers say that a hundred times in the past few years?

Yes. Boys and girls are young only once. The impressions made on their minds and sensibilities are made then for always. They can't have another youth in which to wipe away youthful impressions, and unclean impressions can soil the mind for all times.

Now, nice boys prefer nice girls, although sometimes they think it a bit thrilling to rush the other kind—if such defection does not estrange the modest girls.

Let the sweet girls be withdrawn from dances where the other kind are allowed—two or three of the "other kind" can give their tone to an evening—and the boys themselves will see to it that the other kind are not included in the next dance.

St. Anthony Suffered, Too.

ONE particular group of college boys held a conference not long ago which resulted in an ultimatum sent to a girl who had heretofore been a regular attendant at their parties.

Unless she changed her ways, was the sense of the ultimatum, they could not invite her again. They were all dead tired of having to kiss her.

Good Memories in November.

THE republican women at Cleveland had to throw sand in the eyes of the national committee in order to put over what they wanted—a fifty-fifty representation.

Which, incidentally, the democrats gave the women four years ago without being buncoed out of it.

The women of the country are likely to recall this in November.

It is the reasonable thing that they will attach themselves to the party which shows a spirit of fairness, rather than the one which makes every concession a favor to be fought for.

THOSE prophets who declared that a woman would vote as her husband does must have been edified by the contrary attitudes on this very matter of Coleman duPont, of Delaware, and his wife, both of whom were delegates at Cleveland.

Mrs. DuPont worked for fifty-fifty representation for the republican women.

Mr. DuPont was quoted as taking the position that the committee should be composed of but one member from each state, man or woman, and "if the woman is the better man, let her be elected."

In Their Spare Time.

"AFTER watching them ply powder puffs and lip sticks in trolley cars and railroad trains," says Mr. James J. Montague, "one wonders what girls do with their time when they're at home."

Why, Mr. Montague, they ply powder puffs and lip sticks.

Summer Joys.

ALL the summer homes at Mosquito Bluffs and Strawberry Hills are like bee hives just now, overflowing with visiting relatives and friends, helping their hosts get their summer rest.

Pretty soon the resort hotels and health centers will fill up with said hosts, recuperating from the strenuosity of the simple life, while Mosquito Bluffs and Strawberry Hills will be deserted until a year's time will have erased from the memory of their owners this year's dubious joys.

Miss Symmers Weds Robert B. Turner At Church Ceremony

The wedding of Miss Kathryn Elizabeth Symmers and Robert Brunson Turner was a lovely event of Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the First Baptist church. Dr. Charles W. Daniel, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony.

Tall pedestal baskets of Easter lilies, tied together with festoons of smilax, outlined the aisle of the church and the altar was banked with palms which lent a deep green background against which gladoli were effectively massed. White cathedral candles shed a soft glow over the beautiful decorations.

Miss Mary McDaniel sang "Oh! Promise Me," and "At Dawning," before the ceremony. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played for the entrance of the bridal party and the march from "Midsummer Night's Dream," by Mendelssohn, was used as a recessional.

Lovely Costumes.

The bridesmaid, maid of honor, and matron-of-honor wore exquisite gowns of georgette crepe becomingly fashioned in long-waisted effect with skirt made with flounces on one side and shirring on the other. They wore fascinating poke bonnets of georgette crepe, to match their gowns, trimmed in pink roses with becoming streamers of georgette crepe tied to one side under the chin. They carried shower bouquets of pink sweet peas and pink rosebuds.

Miss Marie Donnelly, the bridesmaid, was gowned in sunset yellow crepe with hat to match. She carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds and sweet peas.

Miss Elizabeth Turner, sister of the groom and maid of honor, wore a costume of soft shell pink georgette and a picture hat of the same color.

Mrs. Thurman Thompson and Miss Elizabeth Turner carried shower bouquets of pink roses and sweet peas.

Beautiful Bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, William Burwell Symmers, was lovely in a Lanvin costume of green charmeuse, and a close-fitting hat of the same material and shade. Her shower bouquet was bride roses and valley lilies.

Acting as groomsmen and ushers were Edward S. Hanigan, Douglas H. Symmers, Freeman Hiscox, Harry E. Robocker, Ward Burts and James Everett Turner.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Turner left in their car for a visit to resorts on the Florida coast and on their return will be at home on Lanier drive.

WHAT IS THE USE OF LIVING?

What is the use of living when a woman gets up in the morning as tired as when she went to bed at night with headache, backache, dragging-down pains, nervous, irritable and despondent? These are all symptoms of ailments peculiar to her sex which makes life a burden. Every woman in this condition should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a good old-fashioned remedy made from roots and herbs. It contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and for fifty years has been restoring women to health and strength and the joys of living.—(adv.)

Miss Harman Weds Mr. Lindsey At Impressive Home Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Rebekah Apsyllah Harman and John Clifton Lindsey, of Moultrie, was an event of brilliant social prominence which took place Tuesday at high noon at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Harman, on Ponce de Leon avenue in Druid Hills.

Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony, which was witnessed by a large assemblage of relatives and friends, and preceding the ceremony a program of music was renderer by Enrico Leide and his orchestra, and as the bridal party descended the stairway the wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played. Just before the ceremony Miss Jean Kendrick, of Fort McPherson, sang "I Love Thee," by Greig, accompanied by Mr. Leide.

Altar Decorations.

Flowers in the pastel shades and foliage plants decorated the lower floor of the handsome home, and the walls, door arches and windows were festooned with a graceful tracery of wild huckleberry vines, and the chandeliers and great stairway were garlanded with southern smilax. An improvised altar of stately palms, ferns and smilax was arranged in the living room, and two large cathedral candelabra held lighted tapers. A large basket, holding while gladioli, ornamented the center of the altar.

The stairway down which the bridal party descended was garlanded with smilax and at the foot of the stairs, forming an aisle to the altar, were white aisle posts entwined with smilax and connected by broad white satin ribbon streamers.

Bridal Party.

The bridal party included Miss Josephine Douglas, of Murfreesboro, Tenn., as maid of honor; Mrs. Richard Battle Stitt, of Charlotte, N. C., Miss Harriet Payne, of Springfield, Tenn.; Miss Kate Page, of Southern Pines, N. C.; Miss Mary Sadler and Miss Irene Thomas as the bridesmaids.

Their exquisite and becoming gowns were fashioned alike of chiffon over crepe de chine. The full skirts had a band across the bottom of cream lace and a band of the same lace was also inserted in the skirt and on the bodice. The tiny sleeves and round neck were bound in chiffon. Their large picture hats were made of tulle to match the gowns, and tulle streamers extended under the brim and wound about their shoulders to form graceful scarfs. Their old-fashioned shower bouquets were of roses, sweet peas, snapdragons, larkspur, Canterbury bells, fox glove, ragged robins, gladioli and poppies, in the gorgeous summer hues, showered with sweet peas and lilies of the valley.

The bride's only sister, Miss Ann Scott Harman, acted as junior bridesmaid. She wore a lovely gown of white d'esprit, veiling flesh chiffon. The girdle of two-toned pink and blue ribbon was confined at either side by little pink and blue French flowers made of the ribbon. She carried a beautiful old-fashioned bouquet of Ophelia roses showered with valley lilies in a round lace paper holder.

Beautiful Bride.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Charles Edward Harman, with whom she entered the room, and met the groom and his best man, Gene Vereen, of Moultrie, at the altar. She was beautiful in her wedding gown of cream tinted lustrous and shimmering satin, veiled. The full skirt of chiffon was finely tucked, and over this fell four graceful panels of the chiffon edged with a delicate tracery of tiny pearls and crystals. The same lovely edging was used to outline the neckline and arm-holes. There were no sleeves. In the center front of the soft chiffon girdle was an exquisite cabochon of pearls and crystals. A court train of chiffon fell from her shoulders, and was bordered in narrow bands of rose point lace. Scattered here and there down the entire length of the train were dainty sprays of orange blossoms. The tulle wedding veil was adjusted to her soft brown hair with a bandeau of rose point lace, this exquisite lace having been worn by her mother at her wedding. Two graceful sprays of orange blossoms held the bandeau in place and the veil fell in misty folds the length of the train. Her gorgeous bridal bouquet was of orchids, showered with valley lilies, swainsona and white satin ribbons which reached to the floor. She wore as her only ornament a beautiful strand of pearls, the gift of her parents.

Reception and Breakfast.

Following the ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast was given, and all of the details were carried out in similar effect to the marriage of the bride's parents.

The bride's round table in the dining room was overlaid with the same beautiful cloth that covered Mrs. Harman's bridal table and gracing the center was a large French basket filled with sweet peas, larkspur, snapdragons, roses and gladioli in the pastel shades. Encircling this were smaller baskets filled with similar blossoms and joined to the center basket by garlands of smilax. Silver comports placed at intervals held white mints embossed in pastel-shaded sweet peas, and the favors were tiny white silk tulle bags of rice tied with white ribbons and orange blossoms and little boutonnieres made of candy in the shape of orange blossoms.

The bride's cake was embossed with pastel-shaded flowers and contained silver wedding symbols. The charming place cards were hand-painted in slippers and cupids, and were exactly like those used at her parents' wedding.

Handsome Gowns.

Mrs. Harman, the bride's mother, received the guests wearing a handsome gown of white georgette crepe combined with lace veiling white satin. The gown was tucked and trimmed with pearls. Her corsage was a shower of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie, aunt of the groom, wore a beautiful gown of black net and lace combined, and a corsage bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Harman was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Albert Cox, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mrs. Thomas Cooper, Mrs. Murphy Chandler and Mrs. Nellie Scott Chandler, aunts of the bride, and the bride's cousin, Mrs. Henry King, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Mrs. Albert Cox was gowned in black lace, and her corsage was of orchids.

Mrs. Henry King wore a lovely model of white chiffon and lace combined. Her corsage was of pink sweetpeas.

Miss Neel Kendrick, of Fort McPherson, kept the bride's register. She wore a lovely gown of flesh georgette crepe over yellow chiffon, with a becoming picture hat to match. Miss Jean Kendrick was gowned in flesh georgette crepe, and her hat matched her gown.

Punch was served on the screened veranda, where quantities of growing plants and green foliage were used in decorating. The crystal punch bowl was embedded in a mound of fragrant summer blossoms and garlanded with smilax. Mrs. Walter Wellborn and Miss Sara Smith presided at the punch bowl. Mrs. Wellborn wore a white crepe de chine gown trimmed with baby Irish lace, and Miss Smith was lovely in a georgette crepe and lace frock.

Wedding Journey.

Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey left for their wedding trip and later will go to Moultrie, Ga., to reside. Mrs. Lindsey traveled in a smart one-piece frock of dark blue charmeen trimmed with gray and worn with a small close-fitting gray hat and a gray fox fur piece.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Vereen and Eugene Vereen, of Moultrie, Ga.; Mrs. Albert Cox and Mrs. Henry King, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Mrs. J. A. Thomas, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. Ashby Baker, of Raleigh, N. C.; Wilkes Sanders, of Washington, Ga.; Miss Josephine Douglas, of Murfreesboro, Tenn.; Mrs. Richard Battle Stitt, of Charlotte, N. C.; Miss Harriet Payne, of Springfield, Tenn.; Miss Kate Page of Southern Pines, N. C.; Gross Harper, of Washington, Ga., and Horace Currey, of Quincy, Florida.

Distinguished Families.

The bride, while never having been formally presented to society, has been very popular among the social contingent, and a great belle at the college dances and festivities. She was educated at the North Avenue Presbyterian school, Washington seminary, and later at Agnes Scott college.

Mrs. Lindsey's parents are among the best-known and most popular of Atlantans, outstanding figures in the life of the city, and her father a prominent capitalist.

Her brother is Mr. Charles Edward Harman, Jr., and her younger sister is Miss Anne Scott Harman. The bride is a representative of families prominent in Atlanta and the state since their foundation. On her maternal side she is the granddaughter of the late Colonel and Mrs. George W. Scott, of Decatur, leaders in all activities, religious, cultural and social, in Decatur, one of the oldest communities in Georgia. Colonel Scott was the founder of Agnes Scott college, giving it the name of his mother and endowing it generously, and was also a noted philanthropist. He served in the Confederate army with the rank of colonel in the war between the states. Mrs. Lindsey's maternal aunts are Mrs. Murphy Candler, Mrs. Nellie Scott Candler, and Mrs. Thomas L. Cooper, all of Decatur, and the late Mr. Booker Scott was her uncle.

On her paternal side the bride is the granddaughter of the late Colonel Zachariah Harman, a leading lawyer of Forsyth, and the late Mrs. Apsyllah Harman, for many years one of the best known and beloved of Atlanta women of a former generation, and the young bride bearing the name of the two grandmothers is the niece also of Mrs. Albert Cox, of Chattanooga, Tenn., formerly of Atlanta, a leader of all forms of women's activities, and her sisters, the late Mrs. E. P. Black and Mrs. A. J. Orme, Sr., than whom there was never in the city a finer trio of women.

Mr. Lindsey is a leader among the young citizens of Moultrie, a graduate of the McCauley school in Chattanooga, Tenn., and later attended Oglethorpe university, and is a member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. He is the son of the late Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Clifton Lindsey, beloved and constructive residents of Moultrie, his mother having been formely Miss Jennie McNeil, of Cheraw, S. C.

Mr. Lindsey bears the name of his uncle, the late Mr. John Lindsey, for many years pension commissioner of Georgia, and is the nephew of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie; Mrs. W. F. Fair-Weather Wives

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

THE UNANSWERABLE ARGUMENT.

"My dear child," cooed Mrs. Boyce-Nevins, refolding Hollister's farewell letter, "why didn't you show me this at once, instead of frightening me out of my wits? Heaven knows my heart isn't strong any more after the terrific shocks I've had in the last months."

Marjorie made a helpless gesture. "What good does it do? It's only his way of making me feel as small, as cheap, as worm-like as possible. Of course, I deserve it, we all deserve it. But at least I'm going to have the satisfaction of throwing his generosity in his face."

Flags of anger flew again in the Dresden china face. Mrs. Boice-Neviins leaned forward, her eyes mere glittering slits.

"You'll do nothing so imbecile. Don't be a fool twice in one week. You'll accept that offer and bind the acceptance with a lawyer on both sides. . . . Why don't you see, you ridiculous, quixotic youngster, this fixes us for life? Reed gives you Soundview and its upkeep and a generous allowance besides. We can keep up our present mode of living, send Dan to college, and have a large residue."

"You can't mean what you're saying, mother. You haven't so little pride that you'd accept Reed Hollister's charity."

Mrs. Boice-Nevins shrugged her white shoulders.

"Once I may have had pride. Yes, I rather think I did. But now, I've no scruples against taking anything I can get from a man. They're faithless brutes, fearfully selfish—look at your father, failing the way he did, dooming us to penury, if I hadn't had the wit to provide you with a wealthy husband. Your father did nothing to help us out, after the fiasco. It was all I could do to get him away to South America where he at least won't be around to disgrace us and remind everybody of our misfortune."

Marjorie said nothing. She was staring at her mother curiously, as if seeing her for the first time.

"We'll see Reed's attorney first thing tomorrow," Mrs. Boice-Nevins went on briskly, "and get everything settled. Then we'll have a regular shopping orgy. I haven't a rag. I was too busy seeing to your trousseau to buy myself anything," she smiled upon her daughter benignly. "Ah, my dear, mother love is a wonderful thing!"

"Please don't!" Marjorie rose to her feet with a gesture of distaste. "I loathe hypocrisy."

"How impertinent! I"——

"Listen, mother," Marjorie went on desperately, standing appealing before her. "I can't accept Reed Hollister's offer, even if you want to. I am going to let him divorce me for desertion, and, in the meantime, I'm going to work."

Mrs. Boice-Nevins smiled satirically.

"At what, my dear?"

Marjorie shrugged.

"There must be something I can do."

"Of course," her mother agreed pleasantly. "You might even earn $10 a week as a shop girl. That would help us a great deal, wouldn't it? . . . I want you to wait a moment."

She gathered up her wrap and left the room. In a few minutes she was back, bearing a large wicker basket in her arms. It was overflowing with letters.

"Do you know what these are?" she inquired.

"Letters of condolence, I suppose," Marjorie gave a wry smile.

"Bills," Mrs. Boice-Nevins informed her grimly. "Bills for your trousseau, for the wedding breakfast, the flowers, the music, the extra servants. Bills for the household expenses of the last two months since your father failed. Bills for the frocks we purchased for our fortnight with the Thornton Baynes. They represent more thousands of dollars owed to our creditors than you'd ever believe. I haven't stinted. I've been depending on you. I thought you were clever I didn't know I'd reared and cherished a fool," she ended bitterly.

She flung the basket on the floor at Marjorie's feet and the great mass of letters slithered out across the rug like a serpent. Marjorie, looking at them, shuddered.

"How," queried Mrs. Boice-Nevins smoothly, "do you propose to pay those outstanding debts and support me and yourself on $10 a week?"

Marjorie made no reply. She was staring down at the accusing array before her. To her vivid fancy, there seemed to be something alive, something personal, about each white oblong. It was thought each white obher with its separate tongue, each mocked at the honor of the Boice-Nevins.

"I swear to you, Marjorie, that if you refuse this offer of Reed Hollister's and doom us to poverty, I'll kill myself! I won't suffer privation, the loss of everything dear! I'll take my own life, I swear it, as God is my witness!"

A. A. Bible Class Gives Musicale.

The closing exercises of the A. A. Bible class were held Sunday night, June 15, at the A. A. synagogue.

Charles Bergman, who has been a very efficient president of the class, opened the program with a talk. Isadore Jacobs was chairman of the program. Joel Dorfan, president of the congregation, gave a welcoming address. Miss Sylvia Fine gave a vocal solo. Abe Shamos gave a talk on the "Psalms," Miss Anna Lesnoff gave a beautiful piano solo. Miss Evelyn Goldstein, one of the prize winning members of the Bible class, gave a recitation. Sam Proger, one of Atlanta's most talented young violinists, rendered the violin solo "Souvenir" and encored with "Elegie." One of the most enjoyable numbers on the program was a violin duet of Russian songs by Meyer Seigal and Herman Effel, both of the Metropolitan orchestra. The A. A. Music club closed the program with one of their popular songs.

Classes will open again in the fall and it is anticipated that the Bible class will have a larger membership than ever before.

Judge McClelland To Address Club.

Judge L. F. McClelland, exalted ruler of the Atlanta lodge of Elks, will address the members of the West End Woman's club on the subject of "How the Elks Plan to Finance Their New Building," on Wednesday, June 18, at 3 o'clock, at the club rooms of the West End Woman's club, at 258 1-2 Lee street, near Gordon. The address is expected to be of especial interest to the members of the club and to West End in general, as the West End Woman's club is expecting to begin in a very few weeks the erection of a beautiful club house on Cascade road. All residents of West End are invited to be present.

J. T. Tucker will sing a tenor solo, "Dearest Maid, Hear My Song." Mr. Tucker is known as the possessor of a beautiful voice. Don Armand, tenor, and Miss Jean King, accompanist, of the Jimmie Hodges company, now playing at the Forsyth theater, will sing a group of songs, to include the aria from "Lakme," by Leo Delibes; a Roumanian folk song, "Doina;" "Then You'll Remember Me," from "The Bohemian Girl."

Popular Price Matinee Today.

Bargain prices will prevail at the matinee of "The Torch Bearers" this afternoon at the Atlanta Woman's club auditorium in order to allow as many high school students as possible to attend the performance.

Admission will be 50 cents throughout the house, and Mrs. George Price, general chairman for the four junior high schools, urges a large attendance of students at this time. The play, which is sponsored by the Parent-Teacher associations of the schools, is one which every boy and girl will enjoy.

PETER F. JONES, FORMER ATLANTAN, IS LAID TO REST

Peter F. Jones, pioneer Atlanta citizen and distinguished Confederate veteran, died Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. B. H. Dunn, at Dunsdale, Va., according to word received in Atlanta. Funeral services were held at Dunsdale.

Mr. Jones, who was 87 years old, lived in Atlanta practically his entire life. He was born July 18, 1836, in Gwinnett county, Ga., and moved to Atlanta with his parents when a small boy. He was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Jones.

He served throughout the Civil war as a member of Company A., First Georgia regiment, and is said to have been the first to carry a Georgia flag during the war. With his death, only one member of the company survives.

He is survived by a sister, Mrs. George L. Bell, of Atlanta; a brother, DeWitt C. Jones, also of Atlanta; two sons, Adam W. Jones, of Atlanta, and Clarke H. Jones, of New York city, and two daughters, Mrs. L. C. Buckner, of Roanoke, Va., and Mrs. B. H. Dunn, of Dunsdale.

MAYOR REQUESTS COUNCIL TO CHECK ALLEGED ERRORS

Clerical errors in the accounts of te tax assessor's office and delay in making out bills for street work in the construction department were disclosed in the audit of the city's account for 1923, made public Tuesday by the finance committee of council. Dawson & Eidson, certified public accountants, are auditors.

Establishment of a new department in which all bookkeeping for all departments would be done was recommended by the auditors.

Insufficient force to keep track of the volume of routine work was given both in the construction and tax offices as the cause for errors in accounts. Two taxpayers had been credited with the full amount of 1923 taxes, although a check showed they had failed by $7,500 to pay them. Mayor Walter A. Sims asked investigation of the errors in a letter to council.

FORESTRY ASSOCIATION MEETS HERE JUNE 23

The Georgia Forestry association will hold its annual convention in Atlanta here on June 23, it was announced here Tuesday.

At the morning session of the convention there will be discussed the following subjects: Educational plans, reports of committees, discussion of forest influences on health and the public welfare, and the advisability of increasing areas of publicly owned forest lands by the government, county, state and national, for recreation and the preservation of wild life, as well as for economic uses.

At the noon hour there will be a luncheon conference to which the public is invited, sponsored by the Federation of Women's Clubs, at which the governor of Georgia and others will make brief talks.

The afternoon session will be devoted to a round-table discussion on state forestry policies, resolutions and the annual election of officers.

One-Day Meeting.

In the evening a special forestry dinner will be given by the association and further discussion on state forestry policy will be open to all guests present.

"Unlike former conventions of this association and other foresty bodies of recent years in the south," Bonnell H. Stone, president of the association, stated, "the program this year will be confined to a one-day meeting. We feel the need of more concentrated study of the facts, and a thorough discussion of our problem, our prospects, our possibilities, and our plans and purposes here in Georgia.

"Georgia not only has to face the fact of her rapidly diminishing timber supplies," Mr. Stone continued, "but Georgia has new worlds to conquer for her industry and commerce, and it would be the greatest folly if we Georgians do not begin at once to develop our unsurpassed facilities for new wealth in pulp and paper from our pines and other trees in this state.

"The Georgia Forestry association wants our citizens to be convinced; our people to be prosperous; our cities to be closed to the country, and all this can be accomplished if we will make of our forests our future fortunes," he said.

EDWIN P. JOHNSON MAY ENTER RACE TO SUCCEED SIMS

Edwin P. Johnson, chairman of the board of county commissioners, was urged by friends Tuesday to enter the race for mayor of Atlanta in case the general assembly adopts the charter amendment asked by council Friday to annex the strip of land along Peachtree road in which he resides. He now lives outside of the city and is not eligible to run for mayor. In event the city limits are extended by the general assembly this summer, he will have time to enter the race before the books close on August 25.

Many Recommendations Made in Auditor's Report

Samuel J. Slate, head of the department of audits of the state government, Tuesday submitted his first official report to the governor, covering the period since February 1, last, when the new department was first created.

Mr. Slate reported that about 20 of the state institutions and departments have been audited, and that these audits are on file and copies may be found in the auditor's office at the state capitol.

In his report, Mr. Slate makes various recommendations tending to economy and simplicity in the handling of the state's funds, as required in the law which created his department.

Recommendations Made.

Chief among these are recommendations that the duty of issuing all state warrants be kept in the auditor's office; the appointment of a central purchasing agent for buying of supplies for all state departments and institutions; prompt payment of all money collected under authority of the state into the state treasury, there to be disbursed under the general plan of the state; greater detail in making of appropriations by the legislature; a system of self-insurance for fire protection on all state-owned property and the devising of some system to do away with the practice of discounting state school warrants.

"It is useless to attempt to prepare for large payments, or to arrange a system by which the state's bill and expenses can be promptly paid, unless the issuance of warrants is kept in the auditor's office," says the report.

Save $40,000 to $60,000.

In regard to a central purchasing agent for the state, the report estimates that such an official could have saved the state, last year, $19,000 on purchases of coal alone. It is estimated the entire saving to the state through such an officer would run from $55,000 to $75,000 per year, while the expense of the department would be from $12,000 to $15,000. It would be necessary, says the report, to engage a purchasing agent, an assistant and two steno-bookkeepers.

"If the bill should be introduced," says the report, "to create a central purchasing agent, this bill should be carefully drawn, with enough flexibility to allow each department to function without too much red tape, and yet on the other hand to give the purchasing agent sufficient authority to control the major purchases of the state, and to force the departments to make all purchases through the central purchasing system."

The report continues by stating that the present purchasing of state supplies, without any supervision, is one of the loosest conditions in the handling of the state's money and concludes this portion of its recommendations by saying:

Benefit Budget System.

"A central purchasing agent would be beneficial in the system of budget expense and would be of material benefit in an investigation of bills and items of expense of various departments and institutions of the state government."

The report recommends a careful study of the state's fiscal system to the legislature. It says:

"We find that we have increased different agencies collecting money for the state of Georgia. . . .

"The auditor is firmly convinced that all money of every nature, character and kind, which is collected under the authority of the state, should be paid at frequent intervals into the state treasury and there be disbursed under the general plan of the state."

Have No Budget Commission.

Referring to the need of a budget system for the state, the report says: "'We have an investigation committee in this state, but as yet have no budget commission. Until appropriations come under a budget system, in order to secure the necessary economy in the handling of the state's money, the legislature should give the auditor some idea as to the distribution of the appropriation.

"Appropriations are frequently made in a lump sum, such as $50,000 for the support of a certain department or institutions, the entire spending of which is left to the head of the department. Many states require any institution or department which requests an appropriation to submit in detail form a request, and to make the appropriation in that form, and that the department shall obtain the approval of the governor, the comptroller general and the auditor before transferring a part of the appropriation from one purpose to another. This gives the auditor some idea as to how the legislature intended that certain money appropriated by it should be spent."

Recommends Self-Insurance.

Pointing out that the state appropriates the sum of $5,000 annually to pay for maturing policies of insurance, and that in addition to this it will have to appropriate, in two more years, from $100,000 to $125,000 to pay the state's part of the fire insurance carried on public buildings for the five-year period, Mr. Slate suggests that it might be wise for the state to simply hold this money in a sinking fund, invested at interest, and pay all fire losses to state institutions out of this fund. He points out that the fact that all buildings are widely scattered over the state, and even when grouped for one institution are not usually in proximity to each other, makes it an ideal fire risk and intimates his belief that such a system of self-insurance would prove economical to the state in the long run.

In regard to the method of issuing school warrants, he suggests that the borrowing power of the governor be increased from $500,000 to $3,000,000 and that the governor then issue short-term notes, not over a year, to pay the common schools month by month. The discount on these notes should be paid by the state, he adds, as he does not believe the interest on these warrants should be paid by the school teachers.

In conclusion, the report says:

Thanks State Officials.

"The auditor desires to express his appreciation of the hearty cooperation the governor of the state has given him in the work of installing and putting into operation the audit department. He desires also to express his grateful appreciation of the hearty cooperation given him by the two fiscal officers of the state, the Hon. William J. Speer, state treasurer, and the Hon. William A. Wright, comptroller general. Both of these officials and all of their associates have cooperated with this department and given us the benefit of their experience and advice. Their advice and cooperation have been very valuable indeed.

"All the official heads of the different departments of the state government and the institutions have been uniformly courteous, and have afforded both the auditor and his examiners all the assistance in their power in making audits and in opening up their records and books for our inspection."

Business Men—
Your Finest Vacation
Has Double Value—See what this section offers

HERE'S a summer full of rest and recreating outdoor activity. And here's a special interest for business men that makes a summer here more than just a vacation.

Southern California is an almost perfect summerland for it has an almost perfect summer climate. Beautiful days follow cool, restful nights.

47 Junes	66 degrees	47 Augusts	71 degrees
47 Julys	70 degrees	47 Septembers	69 degrees

Summer is the rainless season, too, so each day is fine for outdoor fun.

And the thousand things to do and see bring the complete change that refreshes and rebuilds tired minds and bodies.

Strange sights, rare beauties, your favorite sport, all are here. In fact, the attractions of three continents are combined in this single section of your own United States.

This is the vacation that you and your family need.

But there's another value here for you. It's an amazing business and industrial growth that is attracting the attention of the entire country.

You want to know about it. For growth like this means great opportunities. And Southern California offers more to industries and investors than almost any other section of the United States.

The climate—equable at all seasons—reduces heating and lighting bills thus resulting in a saving in manufacturing costs and in the cost of buildings.

And the climate makes healthy, happy workers.

Great sources of raw material—wool, cotton, iron, silk, etc.—are nearby. And Southern California is the gateway to rich markets—the Pacific Coast, South America and the Orient.

Here is the cheapest hydro-electric power in America—rates less than one cent per K.W.H. for large consumers. Fuel is cheap—natural gas for industrial use as low as 25 cents per thousand feet, fuel oil $1.25 per barrel.

A sea port of untold possibilities and transcontinental railroads connect Southern California with the world.

Come this summer for your finest vacation. The special summer round trip railroad rates make it easy to do. Your accommodations will fit your purse.

THE RADIO BUG.

A radio bug is Sophronia Hugg,
When the air jazz commences then up comes the rug;
She'll dance all the time there's a wave in the ether
And shake to its bottom the building beneath her.
She has cracked all the plaster and worn out the floors,
She has loosened the rafters and wrecked all the doors.
The sheiks all avoid her, a-tremble with fear,
She has killed off dance partners from far and from near.
The girl's not exactly a delicate wren;
She raises the beam at two hundred and ten!
She says that she dances to make herself thinner,
But keeps getting fatter and fatter, the sinner!
Her neighbors all wait, as a most welcome thriller,
To see the whole building cave in and so kill 'er!

FROM OUR CHILDREN'S GARDEN OF CURSES.

Recently a widower with a young daughter, Mary, married a widow with a little girl, Rachel, age three.

After they were married, the man took little Rachel on his knee, and tried to explain matters to her; how they would all live together; how his little girl Mary would call Rachel's mother "mamma," and she, Rachel, must now call him "papa;" how her mamma was now his wife and, accordingly, Mary and Rachel were sisters.

Little Rachel listened attentively, and when he got through explaining, sat very quiet for several minutes. Then she asked, seriously: "How did you folks get things mixed up so?"

HUNTING SALAMANDERS WITH DR. TRAPROCK.

"I see that the volcano of Popocatapetl is having its annual eruption," said my good friend, Dr. Traprock, F. R. S. S. E. U. "That is a sign of the eternal youth of mother earth; she is apt to burst out with something of the sort at this time of year.

"It reminds me of the time I went down into the crater of Sassifotu hunting for salamanders, which live, as you know, in the lava-beds of volcanoes.

"The trip down into the crater was a thriller. It was like going to Hades without dying. Probably Dante and I are the only men who have ever done it. I had two specially trained firedogs with me and special equipment designed by myself; an asbestos suit, gas-mask, umbrella or fire-screen, and fireproofed boots for wading in the molten lava.

"At the end of the second day I captured my first salamander, a beautiful, bright red specimen about ten inches long. I took his temperature, which registered 362 Fahrenheit. But I had reckoned without nature.

"It may have been that my presence and that of the fire dogs was like a tickling of the throat to the mountain but at any rate she suddenly erupted with such violence that I, accompanied by 40 tons of assorted debris, was hurled miles in the air. Only the quick use of my fire-screen umbrella as a parachute saved me.

"I landed in the center of Lake Tiki-Nunu. My own temperature was so high that I instantly inflated like a potato dropped in hot grease, and a gentle wind from the southwest watfed me ashore. And a curious thing happened to the salamanders, being accustomed to the terrific heat of the crater, when they came in contact with the colder air at the zenith of our flight they disappeared in the form of gas. But believe me, I never came so near possessing a real salamander."

SURE WAS!

Impertinent clerk: "Buck nothing. Those are three bucks, and they're worth it, too."

Concretely: one reader wrote in and asked: "Can you, in your humorous way, give me the last line, in your Lost and Found department, of the poem beginning:

"The boy stood on the burning deck."

We immediately turned this over to our Lost and Found writer, and very soon the answer will appear.

Therefore, say we, go ahead! We'll run anything your heart desires—if it's good.

Oil in the Can

BY JONATHAN BROOK

Bellman ,according to Molone, had won the Tucky four times in a row and was now bent on winning it the fifth time, after which he planned to cease contesting for it. No other owner had won it more than twice, and Bellman wished to set a mark at which posterity could be a long time shooting.

He prized the two Windblown colts. The Prince and The Pauper. Long-legged, rangy and full of fight, they were a pair to stand pat on, said the redoubtable Pig Molone. Bellman had backed them heavily in the winter books. According to Pig, he stood to lose a hundred thousand dollars, or win from three to five hundred thousand. He had engaged Mullaney and Neal, two hard-riding, hammer-and-tongs jockeys, who won races as often through smashing tactics as through the speed of their mounts. Each was promised a fat purse if either won, so that they were working to a mutual advantage and plotting accordingly.

"If one could spill half the field to let the other win, he'd do it." thought Arthur.

The sum and substance of this evening effort was the conviction that Bellman had everything at stake in the coming Tucky, and would stop at nothing. Money, pride, the honor of the Bellman stable—everything else were in the balance.

On his way back to the hotel that night, Arthur Wamsly stepped on a scales in front of a drugstore. He smiled to himself as he noted the figure.

Next morning he went in search of Mr. Morgan, and carried out the first move in the great play. That was nothing less than the purchase of Cynthia's Child. He arranged that the filly should stay in the Morgan stable and run in the Morgan colors.

"We might do right well in the stakes," Morgan suggested, "if we had a more experienced boy to ride. Do you suppose," this hopefully, "we could arrange to get one?"

"Yes, I do," said Arthur, seriously, "I think we can get one with a lot more experience. An older boy," he added.

Little Arthur was very much excited over the news that his dad had bought the little filly, and asked all manner of questions about his intentions. Of course he would start her in the stakes, if she got over her shaking up all right? Certainly, Arthur Wamsly assured him, that was his intention.

Arthur told Pig of his purchase, and of his intention to start the filly in the Tucky stakes.

"Just like Cynthia," said Arthur. "And she can sure run. Oil in the can, Piig."

"There was nothing slow about Cynthia, as I remember it," Pig rejoined. They were standing at the rail ner the barns, in mid-afternoon.

"And I've got a notion I want to show a certain party what a filly—a good filly, Pig, can do. Against colts, good colts, see?"

"Yeah. I getcha," said Pig Molone. "And it would be a queer thing, Art, if you showed him, after what happened fifteen years ago. But he counts the race already in."

"Well, you tell him for me that the race is not in," said Art. "I'd like to tell him so myself."

"No trouble about that," Pig replied. "Here he comes, now, lookin' for me, I guess. Mr. Bellman, 'member Wamsly, Arthur Wamsly?"

"No, can't say I do," said Bellman shortly. "Now, Pig, about this race—"

"Then I'd just like to recall myself to you, Mr. Bellman," declared Arthur Wamsly, his temper rising. "I'm Arthur Wamsly, Mr. Bellman, used to ride for you. You fired me because you said I was yellow, when Windblown couldn't win the stakes."

Bellman looked down at him and withheld the remark he had intended making to Molone.

"You said I was yellow," continued Art. "And I'm the same Arthur Wamsly who wouldn't sell you the Cynthiana oil claim, out in Oklahoma. See? The one you stole."

"Perfectly legal transaction," declared Bellman, seeking to turn his attention back to Molone, and speaking in the casual manner of one who lazily lifts a hand to brush away a fly.

"Legal steal, you'd call it," declared Wamsly hotly. "And I'm the Arthur Wamsly whose boy you fired not long ago, because you didn't like his name or his looks, or his style."

"Yes ? Well, well, what of it?" asked Bellman, turning to look down directly at the little fellow, with a good-humored air of tolerance. "What of it?"

"Nothing," exclaimed Wamsly. "Nothing at all, except I'm gonna show you something in the Tucky stakes. I've bought the only filly eligible to start, and I'm gonna run the legs offa two black colts beolngin' to you. See?"

"A filly? You boob!" said Bellmna, laughing, "you're wasting your money, little man. Run along now, and don't bother me. Now, Pig—" and he turned back to Pig Molone, shutting off further conversation on Arthur Wamsly's part.

In the jockey room just before the race, all was excitement. The great crowds out to see the renewal of the old Tucky stakes sent their enthusiasm throughout the grounds, invading even the most callous precincts of the hearts of the old horsemen. Jockeys named to ride in the stakes, lucky far beyond their fellows, were nervous and jubilant.

"I'm Wamsly," spoke up Art.

"But you're not the kid,—" began Neal.

"No, I'm not the kid," said Art, stepping toward the two Bellman boys. "But I am Wamsly, and I'm riding the filly, see?"

"Just so yuh don't pull any o' that funny stuff and try ridin' over us," said Mullaney, looking about to see whether any of the other boys appreciated his brand of humor.

"Forget that," snapped Arthur. "Can it. I saw that race, and I saw you two guys. Now listen, I'm ridin', not the kid. And I'm wearin these spurs. See? And Ill have a whip, see? Good, heavy whip. Handle a lot heavier'n the other end," he said. The two Bellman boys looked at him, and then at each other.

Albany, Ga., June 17.—The forty-ninth annual convention of the Georgia Pharmaceutical association convened here this morning with an estimated attendance of between two and three hundred druggists from all parts of the state. Headquarters have been established at the New Albany hotel with T. A. Cheatham, of Atlanta, secretary of the association, in charge.

FELONY CHARGED AGAINST DWIGHT IN UNUSUAL CASE

Indictment charging felony in the alleged sending of a letter threatening injury to Mrs. Charles N. Dwight and Mrs. Phelia Mette by dynamiting the house in which they reside was returned Tuesday against Charles N. Dwight, husband of the first woman, by the Fulton grand jury.

The true bill charges that Dwight sent a letter to Mrs. Mette, with whom Mrs. Dwight was living, threatening that the house would be dynamited. The letter declared, according to the charges, that injury was to be done to the house because of the way Mrs. Dwight had treated her husband. The Dwights are separated, it is said. It was the first indictment on these charges returned in several years, jurors asserted.

Keeping Up Appearances—And Keeping Down Expenses

Right here in Atlanta countless men and women are trying to figure out how they can stretch a moderate income around automobiles and other luxuries of the day.

To many of them it seems like trying to stretch a rubber band around the city's boundaries—but not to all of them.

More and more people are relying upon The Constitution's A-B-C Classified Section to furnish both luxuries and necessities of life—and they're not cutting unmercifully into incomes.

Look through these well-arranged columns and see what they can do for you. Automobiles, pianos, talking machines, washing machines—luxuries and necessities of all kinds—are daily being offered at surprisingly low prices.

Economy is of itself a great revenue
—Cicero

It is fortunate for a country not yet recovered from a mania for extravagance that we have as president a man who lived on $3,000 a year until he became governor of Massachusetts.

His example shows the possibilities of the simple, orderly life, and his demand for economy in national affairs should be heeded by municipal and state officials.

5 JAPANESE ROWDIES APPEAL SENTENCES

Tokio, June 17.—(By the Associated Press.)—The five leaders in the demonstration at the Imperial hotel June 7, when a dance attended by Japanese and foreigners was broken up by rowdies, today appealed from the sentences imposed on them.

The demonstration was a protest against American enactment of legislation barring Japanese immigrants. Three of the five were sentenced to three days in jail; the others received fines of ten yen each. The sentences were imposed as a means of discouraging possible repetition of the demonstration, it was stated in high quarters, after it had been asserted repeatedly there was no law under which the demonstrants could be punished.
